Fiscal cliff talks will most likely go down to wire

By David Espo
Associated Press

Analysis

WASHINGTON – One month before the deadline, negotiations between President Barack Obama and Republicans to save the economy from a plunge over the fiscal cliff are still in the throat-clearing stage. Serious bargaining is on hold while the two sides vie for political leverage.

Deal or no deal, nothing is likely to become clear until far closer to the year-end deadline, when the lure of getting away for the holidays will sharpen the focus of negotiators.

"There's a stalemate. Let's not kid ourselves," House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio, said Friday, punctuating the end of a week of political theater by divided government. "Right now we're almost nowhere."

He spoke as Obama all but called Republicans heartless louts from a Charles Dickens story. Their failure to pass an extension of middle class tax cuts would amount to a Christmas "lump of coal" for millions, Obama said in Hatfield, Pa. "That's a Scrooge Christmas," added the recently-re-elected president, who claims a voters' mandate to extend existing tax cuts for all but upper incomes.

Boehner, too, claimed a mandate after voters renewed the House Republican majority on Nov. 6. But the speaker's political hand was weakened — witness his postelection announcement that the GOP would put revenues on the bargaining table. His control seems to have eroded further in the weeks since, as a smattering of the GOP rank and file let it be known they could support the president's tax plan under the right circumstances.

"Rate increase, if the package includes significant entitlement reform that gets you to $4 to $6 trillion (in deficit savings) over 10 years, I would vote for that," a retiring Rep. Steve LaTourette, R-Ohio, told reporters on Friday.

Rep. Charles Bass made similar comments. "If it gets us past the fiscal cliff and the president is willing to consider meaningful savings in entitlements, it's a legitimate solution," said the New Hampshire lawmaker, who was defeated for re-election this fall.

Yet the speaker also made a little-noticed move this week to shore up his bargaining position.

He issued a statement noting that Senate Democrats are threatening to weaken the Republicans'

Students, staff keep crews busy throughout school year

In addition to a day of education, there are certain things parents expect when dropping their children off at school. Among them: Lights, flushing toilets, and depending on the season, heat or air conditioning.

The Henderson County school system's maintenance department takes care of those things and much, much more.

This week was National Maintenance Appreciation Week where maintenance crews across the country are honored. And for good reason.

For instance, did you know that the Henderson County Schools maintenance staff of 15 is responsible for the upkeep of roughly 1.25 million square feet of buildings and an estimated 270 acres?

"A lot of people don't realize what the department does," said James Taylor, director of maintenance.

"We take care of heating and air issues, plumbing, electrical, carpentry, floor-covering ... any area you can think of to maintain a building."

For the school grounds, there's mowing and weeding, as well as keeping the various sport fields in good condition, he said. During the winter, the maintenance crew is also in charge of "snow removal" from school parking lots.

"We have a very skilled staff ... we use very few subcontractors," Taylor said. "We have two master electricians, a master plumber, two who take care of the kitchen equipment, three who take care of the waste water treatment facilities — which are smaller versions of what the city has — at Spottsville, Niagara and Cairo elementary schools. We have two or three guys who take care of all the carpentry problems ..."

Taylor said the staff also "moves furniture" and delivers books to the schools

Missouri couple claims their half of Powerball

Arizona winner remains unknown

By Maria Sudekum
Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mo. – A 52-year-old Missouri mechanic and his wife claimed their share Friday of the record $588 million Powerball jackpot.

Lottery officials sent a statement Friday announcing that Mark and Cindy Hill, of Dearborn, held one of two winning tickets for the nation's biggest Powerball jackpot.

The Hills will split the $588 million prize with whoever holds a winning ticket sold at a convenience store in suburban Phoenix. No one has come forward yet with the Arizona ticket, lottery officials said.

The $587.5 million payout, which represents the second-largest jackpot in U.S. history, set off a nationwide buying frenzy, with tickets at one point selling at nearly 130,000 per minute. Before Wednesday's winners, the jackpot had rolled over 16 consecutive times without someone hitting the jackpot.

Lottery officials' announcement that the Hills had won only confirmed what many residents in Dearborn, a town of about 500 about 40 miles north of Kansas City, already knew. Lottery officials said Thursday that one winning

Alice P. Taylor's musical tradition to be renewed with Sunday service

By Donna B. Stinnett

It's been more than five decades since Alice Partridge Taylor departed this earth, but her name lives on in Henderson, especially during the Christmas season.

On Sunday, a decades-old music service named for the musician and singer will be presented once again as the Alice P. Taylor Candlelight Service.

This year's service takes place at First United Methodist Church, and begins with an organ prelude at 3:30 p.m.

The founder of this annual service, a native of St. Louis, moved to Henderson from San Francisco in 1897 after she married a young local attorney named N. Powell Taylor.

According to a 2009 article by "Yesterday's news" columnist Frank Boyett, her marriage "brought to a close her ... professional operatic and concert career."

But that certainly doesn't mean she stopped

Deadly, destructive '12 hurricane season ends

By Christine Armario
Associated Press

MIAMI – The 2012 Atlantic hurricane season that spawned the destruction of Sandy and Isaac has come to an end as one for the record books.

There were 19 named storms in what meteorologists consider an above-average year that tied as being the third most-active season since 1851. The season runs from June 1st to November 30th, although tropical storms can and do sometimes develop outside those dates.

Even without a so-called major storm reaching the U.S., there was plenty of damage. A storm is classed as major once it becomes a Category 3 hurricane, with top sustained winds of 111 miles per hour (178 kph) and more.

Seven years have now gone by without a major hurricane making U.S. landfall, the longest stretch on record.

Dennis Feltgen, a spokesman for the National Hurricane Center, said a persistent jet stream pattern has steered storms away from the U.S. in recent years.

It wasn't enough to keep away Sandy, which morphed from hurricane to superstorm as it slammed into the New Jersey coast in October and wreaked havoc across the Northeast. It left millions without power and killed at least 125 people in the U.S. and 71 in the Caribbean.

The storm is estimated to have caused about $62 billion in damage and other losses in the U.S., most of it in New York and New Jersey. It is the second-costliest storm in U.S. history after 2005's Hurricane Katrina.

Hurricane Isaac struck southern Louisiana in August on the eve of Hurricane Katrina's seventh anniversary, swamping the Gulf Coast after trudging through the Gulf of Mexico and delaying the Republican National Convention in Tampa, Fla.

Sandy combined with an early winter storm and blast of arctic air from the north to create a deadly brew meteorologists coined "Frankenstorm" and struck two days before Halloween.

A somewhat similar phenomenon occurred with the so-called Perfect Storm off the coast of New England in 1991, but that storm did not strike a major metropolitan region like Sandy.

"This was certainly one for the record books," Feltgen said.

A typical hurricane season has 12 named storms, six of which become hurricanes and three major storms. This year 10 storms became hurricanes and just one a Category 3 or higher, though it remained in the Atlantic Ocean.

Spain shipwreck treasure shown for the first time

The Associated Press

MADRID – Spanish cultural officials allowed a first peek Friday at some of the 16 tons (14.5 metric tons) of shipwreck treasure worth an estimated $500 million that a U.S. salvage company gave up this year after a five-year ownership dispute.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A silver coin from the shipwreck of a 1804 galleon, on its first display to the media at a ministry building, is shown in Madrid on Friday.

Only a tiny portion of the haul from the Nuestra Senora de las Mercedes, a galleon that sank off Portugal's Atlantic coast near the straits of Gibraltar in 1804, was shown to the media: 12 individual silver coins, a block of encrusted silver coins stuck together after centuries underwater, two gold tobacco boxes and a bronze pulley.

Authorities who have been inventorying the treasure since it was flown from Florida to Spain in February said it will be transferred later this year from Madrid to the National Museum of Underwater Archaeology in the Mediterranean city of Cartagena. Displays are expected to start next year, with some items put on rotating temporary displays at museums across the country.

Though previous estimates have put the value of the treasure at $500 million, Spanish officials said they weren't trying to determine an amount because the haul is part of the nation's cultural heritage and can never be sold under Spanish law.

Gold stolen from Curacao boat

The Associated Press

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao – Masked men in jackets emblazoned with the word "police" boarded a fishing boat Friday in Curacao and stole 70 gold bars worth an estimated $11.5 million, officials on the southern Caribbean island said.

The boat's captain was struck in the head in the early-morning assault before the thieves made off with the gold in three cars, police spokesman Reggie Huggins said. Authorities believe there were at least six men involved in the heist. No suspects were in custody.

Huggins declined to say who owned the approximately 216 kilograms (476 pounds) of gold but he said it was a legal shipment that was being trans-shipped through Curacao and officials in the island had been advised in advance that it was coming as part of normal security protocols. He declined to disclose the eventual destination of the metal.

"Authorities knew of the shipment because the official procedure was followed," the spokesman said.

World AIDS Day memorial service set

Matthew 25 AIDS Services Inc., in collaboration with area churches, will conduct a World AIDS Day memorial service at the Presbyterian Church of Henderson at noon Wednesday, Dec. 5.

The public is invited to the service at the church, located at 100 S. Main St. Soup and sandwiches will be served before the service.

For questions, contact Sally Welch, director of community services at Matthew 25, at 826-0200 or swelch@matthew25clinic.org.

Nature lovers can now be making plans for an annual Kentucky State Park tradition — Eagle Watch Weekends in January and February.

The dates have been set at Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park (Jan. 12-13), Lake Barkley State Resort Park (Jan. 26-27) and Kenlake State Resort Park (Feb. 2-3, yacht tours only).

The park system will sponsor this wildlife-watching opportunity as bald eagles gather around the major lakes of Western Kentucky looking for food. The park tours allow you to observe from land and water and learn about these beautiful birds of prey and other wildlife. They are led by state park naturalists and Department of Fish and Wildlife biologists.

Ticket prices for the tours range from $25 to $50 a person. Most tours last from two to 3½ hours. The weekends also include an evening program on birds of prey.

The parks and their phone numbers are:

Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park (800-325-0146)

Lake Barkley State Resort Park (800-325-1708)

Kenlake State Resort Park (800-325-0143)

Guests should bring warm clothes, rain gear and binoculars. These trips can take place under extreme weather conditions. The resorts offer lodges, cottages and restaurants.

Registration is required for the Eagle Watch Weekends. Call the parks for registration, details and fee information or visit: www.parks.ky.gov and click on the "winter adventure" tab.

The Eagle Watch Weekends at Kentucky Dam Village, Lake Barkley and Kenlake will include an option to view eagles from the CQ Princess, a 96-foot yacht. Guests can view eagles from inside the CQ Princess or from outside decks.

Any group or organization interested in a special cruise on the CQ Princess should call Karen Faughn at Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park at 800-325-0146.

Deer collision sends woman to hospital

A collision with a deer on the Pennyrile Parkway in Webster County sent a Georgia motorist to an Evansville hospital early Thursday evening.

Linda Sue Bledsoe, 66, of Waleska, Ga., was driving alone in a Chrysler PT Cruiser northbound on the Pennyrile at the Hopkins-Webster county line at approximately 5:15 p.m. Thursday when a deer entered the roadway, according to Kentucky State Police. She lost control of her car after hitting the animal, ending up in the median.

Bledsoe, who was wearing a seat belt, was transported via ambulance to Deaconess Hospital in Evansville for treatment of her injuries. Information concerning her condition wasn't available Friday afternoon.

The Hanson Volunteer Fire Department and Webster County EMS assisted state police at the scene.

HCC Dental Clinic accepting patients

The Henderson Community College Dental Clinic is now accepting patients.

The clinic offers cleanings and sealants. The charges are low-cost and discounts are available to children (age 12 and under), senior citizens and HCC students.

Clinic hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

To schedule an appointment, call 831-9708.

Pain clinic owner pleads guilty

COVINGTON, Ky. – A man who owned pain clinics in Florida and Ohio has pleaded guilty in Kentucky to a federal charge of conspiracy to launder money.

The U.S. attorney's office said in a statement that 38-year-old Jody L. Robinson of Portsmouth, Ohio, entered the plea on Thursday in federal court in Covington. The statement said a co-defendant, 34-year-old William Muldoon of Margate, Fla., also pleaded guilty to the same charge.

Federal prosecutors said Robinson acknowledged making more than $400,000 by using a doctor to unlawfully write prescriptions to patients from Lawrence, Boyd and Greenup counties in eastern Kentucky. The statement says patients at the clinics paid about $150 in cash for prescriptions that were usually filled for $300 at an in-house pharmacy.

According to prosecutors, Muldoon advertised the clinics for Robinson.

E. Ky. mayor charged with trafficking

OLIVE HILL, Ky. – The mayor of a small eastern Kentucky city has been charged with trafficking in marijuana.

The Independent reports Olive Hill Mayor Danny Sparks was arrested Wednesday and charged with trafficking within 1,000 feet of a school after officers detained him near Olive Hill Elementary. Police say the arrest came as the result of an investigation that lasted for weeks.

The newspaper reports a call to Sparks' phone seeking comment went directly to voice mail.

Police told WKYT-TV that the charges are an embarrassment to the town, but officers have to pursue justice no matter where the allegations lead. The station said Sparks didn't answer the door of his office on Thursday when it attempted to get comment from him.

Hundreds miss school after perceived threat

BOWLING GREEN – More than half of the students at Warren East High School have missed a day of classes after a message left on a bathroom wall morphed into a perceived threat on social media.

Principal Damon Tabor told the Daily News that about 500 students out of a total of 900 were missing on Wednesday. He used the schools public address system to reassure the 400 who came to school that he would protect them.

"I wasn't concerned about numbers," Tabor said. "I was concerned about safety."

Tabor said the issue began Tuesday evening when graffiti was found in a student bathroom. He said it did not contain any specific threat, but as word spread through social media it morphed into something bigger and worse.

Tabor said he is offering a reward for information on the student who wrote the original message on the bathroom wall.

Hannah Conner, a senior at the school who was one of only three people in her sixth-period class, said the episode has taught her a valuable lesson.

"I learned to definitely listen to and trust my principal and teachers — you can't always trust social media," Conner said.

Patriot coal miners honored for safety

Gleaner staff

Patriot Coal Corp.'s Patriot surface mine in eastern Henderson County and its employees were honored last week for achieving 1 million manhours worked without an accident.

The miners there worked more than 1,776 days without an accident, a streak dating back to Jan. 3, 2008.

Chris Ashby, the surface mine inspector for the Kentucky Office of Mine Safety & Licensing's Madisonville field office presented each of the 75 employees with a certificate recognizing their achievement.

U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration representatives Archie Coburn and Chad Murphy were present as well for a pair of ceremonies Tuesday at the mine that included a steak dinner prepared by mine General Manager Eddie Snell and Safety Manager Tim Ball.

The Patriot mine and an associated coal preparation plant are scheduled for closure at the end of this year.

Party fund for kids brings in $1,900

Gleaner staff

Now that's the way to do it!

Goodfellows from throughout the community — individuals and groups — sent in $1,900 on Friday.

That brings the total so far this year for the Goodfellows holiday campaign for needy kids to $4,445.

The 2012 goal is to raise $33,000 toward gifts that will be handed out at a big party on Dec. 16 at South Middle School for 600 or so local children. As in past years, the gifts will be everything from toys and games to much-needed basics like clothes.

Those who are interested in contributing to the Goodfellows should send their donations to Goodfellows Party Fund in care of The Gleaner, P.O. Box 4, Henderson, KY 42419.

Donations made Friday include:

Thousands accept offer for tax amnesty in Ky.

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT – Thousands of delinquent taxpayers rushed Friday to accept an amnesty offer that allows them to avoid prosecution by willingly catching up on back taxes.

"Definitely, it's the last-minute push," said Pamela Trautner, a spokeswoman for the Kentucky Department of Revenue.

The amnesty offer expires at 9 p.m. local time on Friday. More than 4,200 people applied in the final 24 hours.

Gov. Steve Beshear hopes to generate some $55 million for the state through the amnesty offer, which is intended to help balance a two-year, $19 billion budget.

"I think there's every expectation that we'll be meeting the goals that were set," Beshear told reporters at a Capitol news conference on Friday.

Lawmakers authorized the amnesty offer earlier this year for the nearly 170,000 people and businesses behind on their tax payments.

Stop sex crimes by stamping out porn

You can see in the news that sexual crimes in America are increasing. Rape cases of both sexes are being reported. Also there are many that will not be reported. America has become a sex-perverted nation.

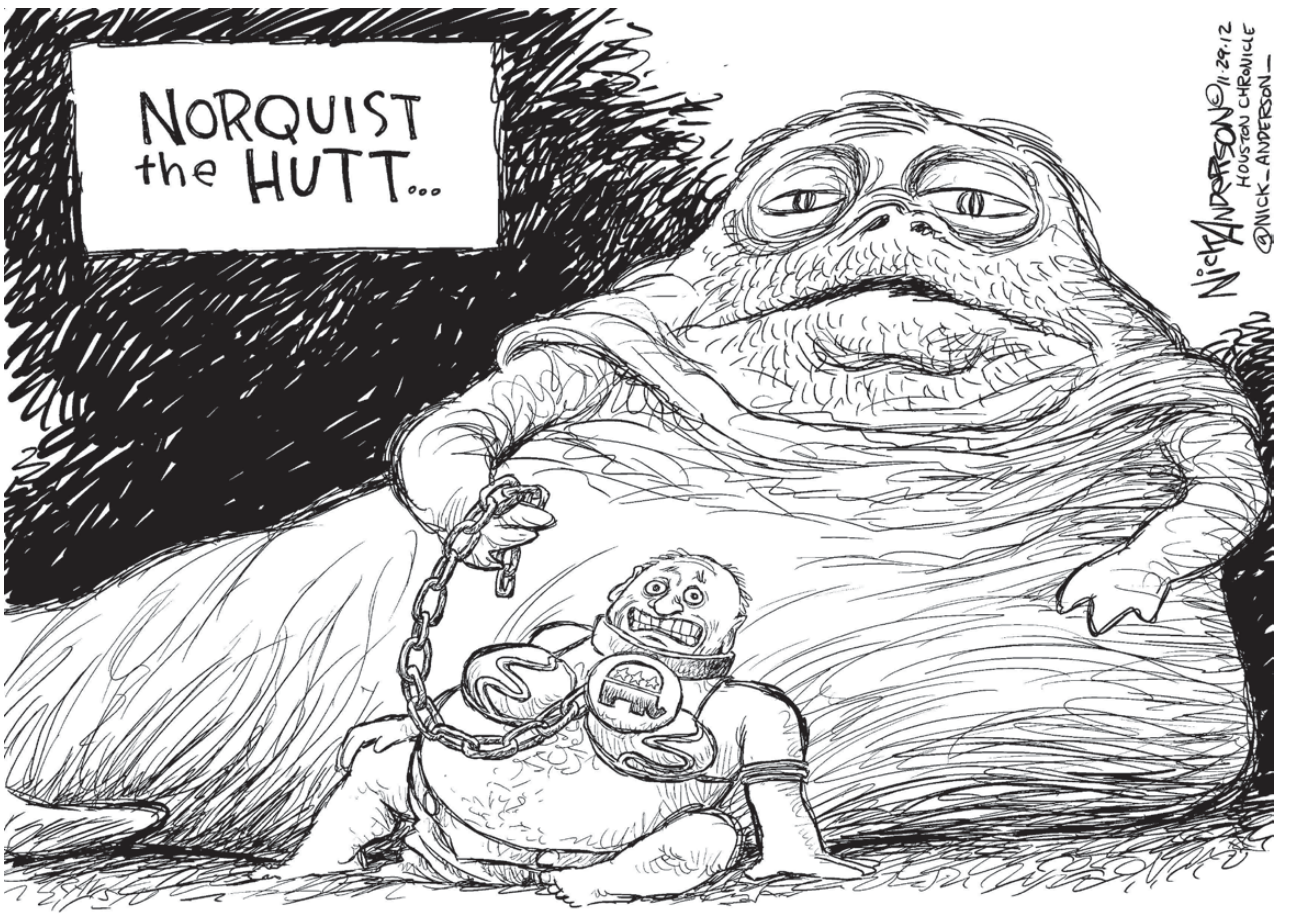

Do you wonder why? When sex ads are big on selling all merchandise. Turn on your television and you will see all kinds of sex shown. Then there are porn movies and magazines that sell big to both males and females.

The evils of all these are entering the minds of people causing them to act on what they see. The mind is what controls mankind, and it is very important what we put into it. The Bible tells us to think on the good so we can make good choices on what we do.

If we do not know what is good then some will think it is normal to do the things they might see on sex tapes. It is not normal to rape someone or sexually abuse children. Just recently a woman who runs a day care was arrested for selling porn of naked children.

It is a fact that big money can be made for those who sell porn movies. Also the stars of porn who make the movies get paid very well.

The way we can stop sex crimes is to stop porn from being sold. There should be a law against selling, making or starring in a porn movie. We should stop all porn magazines. We can stamp out porn by making it against the law and impose a heavy penalty on those who are caught.

Area will suffer over Patriot Coal woes

I am afraid that the bankruptcy of Patriot Coal, which was once part of the largest coal company in the world, will be our downfall.

We are seeing the effect of an Obama re-election. Henderson was slated to become a super prosperous town because of its location with an energy fuel, coal.

Anyone previously associated with the coal industry will tell you that the industry provides many good paying jobs. With the development of means to burn coal cleanly, it is a shame we do not take the benefits of this abundant, domestic energy fuel.

Someday buying fuel and funding countries that are enemies of the United States will bite us hard. You would think that the distress seen from power outages would make us smarter.

Reader clarifies T.E.A. movement values

I enjoy Mr. Hall's submissions. This time I am convinced that he needs to check the proofage of his Vitamin G.

I have to wonder what kind of monster does Mr. Hall reckon the T.E.A. movement to be. A true T.E.A. person is well-informed and far closer to the Libertarian Party than the other two. They also regard political parties to be serious threats to our freedoms. They support the American and state Constitutions with the freedoms set forth within, not the utopian society envisioned by Engels and Marx.

Almost all of the modern conveniences and advanced medical procedures that the world enjoys would never have been created in any place other than a free society.

To illustrate the difference between a draconian tax and regulatory state, Kentucky, and a freer state all one needs do is drive through Clarksville on U.S. 41. One will see the marked contrast. On the Kentucky side 41 is little better than a gravel road with businesses shuttered and or abandoned.

Once at the Tennessee state line the road is wide, smooth and businesses flourish.

Wyoming residents enjoy no state income tax, sales tax of 4 percent, property tax less than Kentucky and a fine infrastructure despite the additional challenges presented by weather and topography. Their unemployment rate is well south of the nation's rate at well under 7 percent.

Perhaps if our esteemed governor would look toward these states he could find practical solutions to Kentucky's problems.

If the federal government would look to these states, it too could find solutions to our current malaise. One suggestion I have is the Fair Tax Act, which would allow everyone 100 percent of their money with a national sales tax being the only tax. Just imagine not dreading what Jan. 1 brings nor totally fearing April 15.

Perhaps the reason Romney lost is no one could tell the difference. More than 13 million voters on both sides that voted in 2008 didn't bother to show up at the polls. A sad reflection on both parties. Seems as if people want something to vote for rather than against — with against not really being against, just modified. A lesser evil is still evil.

It's time to work together for good of nation

The time has come for Mitch McConnell, Rand Paul and the obstructionists in the House to work with the president for the good of this nation. For four years McConnell's one goal was to stop President Obama at every point, while the nation suffered. Mitch spent four years of his "30-year term" with his obsession to defeat the president.

Rand Paul is just the most radical member of the Senate. Remember Paul proposed a Senate bill to cut Social Security by 40 percent. Another Paul bill would get rid of Medicare as we know it.

The House of Representatives had many districts gerrymandered by Republicans in state governments to help the GOP sustain its U.S. House margin. Had the house districts remained at the 2010 position, Democrats would now control the U.S. House of Representatives. Republican governors and legislators did America no favor.

Kentuckians should end McConnell's era; also the radical ophthalmologist Paul's tenure. Isn't it ironic that an eye doctor should be blind to the suffering of the poor and elderly in America?

A.J. Vogel, Henderson

GOP must change to gain White House

Interesting column by Mr. Hartley in the Nov. 10 Gleaner. He hit the nail on the head I do believe. However I don't believe he went far enough.

Exit polling showed 35 percent of voters called themselves conservative, 25 percent liberal and 40 percent moderates. This shows conservatives can never win an election with just their base alone. They must win over moderates. With the too far right Tea Party wing of the Republican Party, they cannot do this.

The perception of the Republican Party is one of "old rich white men" — has been since the days of Rockefeller, Woolworth, J.P. Morgan, Pullman and many other so-called "barons of industry."

Romney, with his wealth, did nothing to dispel this image. Also this year Romney had the albatross of George W. Bush and his policies hanging around his neck. Since Romney never spelled out his so-called "plan," many (including me) wondered if he would revert to the "Bush years" which got us in the mess we are in to a large extent.

African Americans and Hispanics are now the controlling voting bloc in elections as Nov. 6 showed. Republicans must count the black, brown, red and yellow votes and lose the white man image if they ever hope to win the White House again.

Republicans devoted four years (2008-2012) at working to defeat Obama, and it failed. Surely Sen. Mitch McConnell can understand the message. If McConnell continues his obstructionist ways, he would be in jeopardy of losing his seat in two years (2014). In this election everyone running for any office seemed to be running against Obama as much as their opponent.

We have a Congress that is dysfunctional, so what do the people do? Re-elect most everyone of them. Doesn't make sense. Can we expect them to do better being re-elected? I doubt it. It may just make them think the way they have been acting is what the people want. Not so.

Henderson Community Foundation example of vision, leadership

By Judith G. Clabes

GUEST COLUMN

Growing up in Henderson is among the things I give thanks for every day. The luck of getting my start in a place where strong families, good neighbors, engaged churches, fine schools and solid values meant a young girl was well prepared to make her way in the world. Along that journey, there have been many reasons to be proud of my hometown.

But never was I prouder than the evening I was privileged to witness the celebration of the successful launch of the Henderson Community Foundation. In the lovely setting of the new Fine Arts Center on the growing Henderson Community College campus, there unfolded the finest example of community leadership, vision and engagement that could be imagined.

Establishment of community foundations — and endowed funds targeted for every county in our Commonwealth — is a strategic objective of the Kentucky Philanthropy Initiative, a nonprofit I founded to advocate for private philanthropic investment in Kentucky. KPI commissioned and published a groundbreaking study on the transfer of wealth in Kentucky — an astounding $700 billion over 50 years — and provided leadership to establish the Endow Kentucky tax credit.

This amazing progressive legislation provides incentives for people of wealth to contribute to endowed funds in community foundations. These two things — and a "Give-back Kentucky" campaign — have encouraged many new funds around the state.

Community foundations are just that. They are designed to provide communities with the mechanism for building resources — in perpetuity — so that the funds generated provide a solid financial foundation to support quality of life in the community.

The beauty of this approach is that it allows everyone to participate. You do not have to be wealthy, though a community needs its wealth-builders to be involved.

The beauty of community foundations is that even the smallest donations, in a collective effort, add up to significance.

To make community foundations successful — and certainly to start them from scratch — requires a sparkplug.

Often an individual or a group of individuals who take on the effort — and give it their undivided devotion. In Henderson that sparkplug was insurance agent Chase Fulcher, a self-made, hardworking, rags-to-riches success story himself.

Chase just couldn't walk away; raising funds to give the foundation a good start became his "most important life's work." He seized it with evangelistic fervor.

And before that magical night was over he had announced commitments of more than $1.6 million to the new Henderson Community Foundation. Donors included a who's-who of Henderson, founding families and prosperous individuals, many of whom grew up in the nurturing bosom of the county and made quiet, hardworking successes of themselves.

Chase Fulcher will be quick to say he didn't do it alone, but that's almost an overstatement. He very nearly did, though the idea was born with a young leadership group who put the structure in place, a group led by Jennifer Preston and others, and enabled by an "older" leadership group that included Scott Davis, Dale Sights, Ronnie Jenkins, Herb McKee and others. The whole community should join in celebrating these good citizens who set out to make a big difference.

The difference will be a permanent one — a legacy of perpetual funds to underwrite all kinds of good works — scholarships, community development, schools, job training, beautification, feeding the hungry, clothing the poor, creating new opportunities for your youth. The possibilities are limitless.

Now, how can everyday citizens help make a difference? By making your own personal commitment to support the new Henderson Community Foundation. Help build the general discretionary fund by including the foundation in your own personal giving. Contributions are tax deductible. All of them will go only to support your community. No donation is too small. Every penny counts. And pennies add up.

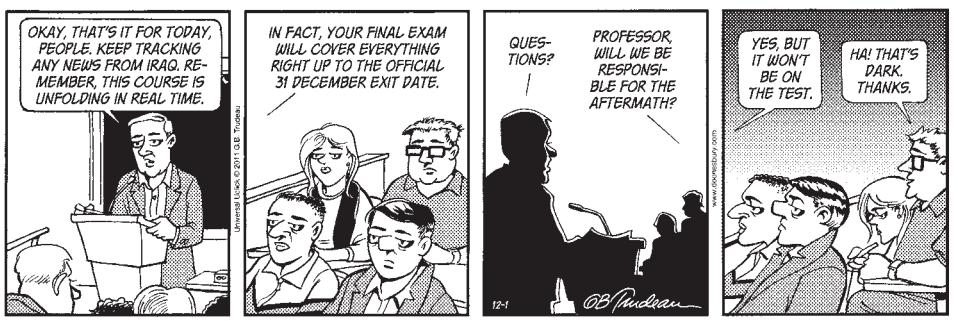

Judith G. Clabes

However the entire community is engaged, it's important to engage everyone — that every person understand that they can and should be part of this terrific endeavor, that everyone feel part of it and feel welcome, that everyone "buys in" to the importance and impact of this great new resource.

Henderson's own community foundation. Wow.

Settlement not decided in ex-IMF chief's case

By Jennifer Peltz
Associated Press

NEW YORK – Attorneys for Dominique Strauss-Kahn on Friday denied that the former International Monetary Fund chief has reached a settlement with a New York City hotel maid who accused him of trying to rape her.

William Taylor III and Amit Mehta said in a statement issued Friday that the parties have merely "discussed a resolution."

A person familiar with the case said Thursday that a settlement had been reached.

"Media reports that Dominique Strauss-Kahn has agreed to pay $6 million to settle the civil case are flatly false," the attorneys said. "The parties have discussed a resolution but there has been no settlement. Mr. Strauss-Kahn will continue to defend the charges if no resolution can be reached."

French newspaper Le Monde, citing people close to Strauss-Kahn, reported the $6 million figure.

Strauss-Kahn's Paris lawyers, Frederique Baulieu, Richard Malka and Henri Leclerc, said they "vigorously deny the fantasist and erroneous information" published by Le Monde.

Lawyers for the maid didn't return a message Thursday.

The New York Times first reported the agreement had been reached.

A settlement would bring an end to a saga that has tarnished Strauss-Kahn's reputation, ended his hopes for the French presidency and renewed a debate about the credibility of sexual assault accusers.

Casper College students try to reach their vehicles after the campus was released from lockdown due to a reported homicide Friday morning in Casper, Wyo. Two people were killed and the attacker committed suicide Friday in an attack at the community college in central Wyoming.

Wyoming man kills 2, self; attack locks down school

■ Professor killed in front of students

By Mead Gruver
Associated Press

CASPER, Wyo. – A man wielding a sharp-edged weapon killed one person in a Casper neighborhood Friday before killing a male teacher and himself in front of students in a community college classroom, causing a campuswide lockdown as authorities tried to piece together what happened.

Police found the suspect and teacher dead at a science building on the Casper College campus, which was locked down for about two hours, school and police officials said. The other victim, a woman, was found in a street about two miles away.

Casper Police Chief Chris Walsh said the murder-suicide took place in a classroom with students present, but he didn't know how many students or what the class topic was.

He said investigators were still trying to determine a motive.

Walsh said an "edged weapon" was used in at least one of the killings, but he didn't offer specifics and it was unclear if the same or a similar weapon was used in all of the deaths.

The attacker wasn't believed to be a Casper College student and it appeared he knew the victims, Walsh said. No names were released.

"We're locating next of kin and working on notification absolutely as fast as we can," Walsh said.

He added authorities didn't believe there was any further threat to the community.

The attack at the two-year community college in Casper, about 250 miles northwest of Denver, occurred just before 9 a.m. in a classroom on the science building's third floor. All students and staff were evacuated from the building.

The college sent out a campuswide alert via text message and email within two minutes of receiving word of the attack at 9:06 a.m., school spokesman Rich Fujita said.

The lockdown ended at about 11 a.m. after school officials received word that police were no longer searching for a suspect, Fujita said.

There are fewer classes on Fridays than any other day of the week at Casper College, so only between 1,500 and 2,000 of the college's 5,000 students were there, he added.

Manning admits he considered suicide

FORT MEADE – As a military prosecutor held up a knotted bedsheet in court, Pfc. Bradley Manning acknowledged Friday that he fashioned a noose and contemplated suicide after his arrest on charges of engineering the biggest leak of classified material in U.S. history.

The pretrial testimony appeared to support the military's argument that it was trying to protect the former Army intelligence analyst from harming himself.

Manning's lawyers argue that the conditions he experienced at the Marine brig in Quantico, Va., amounted to illegal punishment.

Manning, 24, said he fashioned the noose while being held in Kuwait soon after he was accused in May 2010 of leaking reams of military and diplomatic documents to the website WikiLeaks.

High court to rule on human gene patent

WASHINGTON – The Supreme Court announced Friday it will decide whether companies can patent human genes, a decision that could reshape medical research in the United States and the fight against diseases like breast and ovarian cancer.

The current case involves Myriad Genetics Inc. of Salt Lake City, which has patents on two genes linked to increased risk of breast and ovarian cancer. Myriad's BRACAnalysis test looks for mutations on the breast cancer predisposition gene, or BRCA.

But the American Civil Liberties Union challenged those patents, arguing that genes couldn't be patented, and in March 2010, a New York district court agreed. But the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit has now twice ruled that genes can be patented, in Myriad's case because the isolated DNA has a "markedly different chemical structure" from DNA within the body.

NEW JERSEY

Train derails on problematic bridge

PAULSBORO – A freight train derailed Friday on a railroad bridge that has had problems before, toppling tanker cars partially into a creek and causing a leak of hazardous gas that was blamed for sickening dozens of people, authorities said.

Members of the National Transportation Safety Board arrived in New Jersey on Friday afternoon to investigate. They will try to determine whether the derailment was caused by a problem with the bridge or if the derailment was to blame for the bridge's partial collapse.

The accident happened just after 7 a.m. when a train with two locomotives, 83 freight cars and a caboose went from Camden to Paulsboro.

MINNEAPOLIS – A Minnesota football coach sidelined by accusations of child pornography involving his own children reacted with relief Friday after a judge dismissed the case.

Rebels stand pat once again in city

GOMA – Rebels who are believed to be backed by Rwanda once again postponed their departure from Congo's key eastern city of Goma on Friday, defying an international ultimatum for the second time.

The delay raises the possibility that the M23 rebels don't intend to leave the city they seized last week, giving credence to a U.N. expert report that says neighboring Rwanda is using the rebels as a proxy to annex territory in mineral-rich eastern Congo.

An M23 spokesman said Friday morning that for "logistical reasons" the rebels needed 48 more hours to complete their withdrawal, promising that the fighters would leave Goma by Sunday.

Volatile citizenship operation begins

SIN THET MAW – Guarded by rifle-toting police, immigration authorities in western Myanmar have launched a major operation aimed at settling an explosive question at the heart of the biggest crisis the government has faced since beginning its nascent transition to democracy last year.

It's a question that has helped fuel two bloody spasms of sectarian unrest between ethnic Rakhine Buddhists and Rohingya Muslims since June, and it comes down to one simple thing: Who has the right to be a citizen of Myanmar, and who does not?

A team of Associated Press journalists that traveled recently to the remote island village of Sin Thet Maw, a maze of bamboo huts without electricity in Myanmar's volatile west, found government immigration officials in the midst of a painstaking, censuslike operation aimed at verifying the citizenship of Muslims living there, one family at a time.

PUERTO RICO

Search continues for man in Caribbean

SAN JUAN – U.S. Coast Guard crews searched Friday for a Washington state man who was reported missing from a Caribbean cruise.

Two ships and a plane took part in the second day of the search, which was centered about 85 miles northwest of Puerto Rico, Coast Guard spokesman Ricardo Castrodad said.

The man, identified as 42-year-old Jason Gregory Rappe of Olympia, Wash., was reported missing Thursday by his wife from the Holland America cruise ship Eurodam.

A baseball cap belonging to the passenger was found on one of the decks and he is believed to have gone overboard.

"At this point, we are actively searching," Castrodad told The Associated Press. "We are hoping to find a survivor."

He said the Coast Guard had not decided how long it would search.

He said such decisions are made on a case-by-case basis.

The Eurodam was traveling from St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands to the Bahamas when Rappe was reported missing.

The ship turned around to join the search, but Holland America spokeswoman Sally Andrews said the ship had since resumed its voyage. It was scheduled to return to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., today.

Egyptians gather at a banner that reads "members of the Muslim Brotherhood are not allowed," during a demonstration Friday in Cairo's Tahrir Square. The Brotherhood, from which President Mohammed Morsi hails, drummed up supporters for its own mass rally today.

Egypt's draft constitution spurs confrontation threat

By Maggie Michael and Lee Keath
Associated Press

CAIRO – Protesters flooded Cairo's Tahrir Square on Friday in the second giant rally this week, angrily vowing to bring down a draft constitution approved by allies of President Mohammed Morsi, as Egypt appeared headed toward a volatile confrontation between the opposition and ruling Islamists.

The protests have highlighted an increasingly cohesive opposition leadership of prominent liberal and secular politicians trying to direct public anger against Morsi and the Islamists, a contrast to the leaderless youth uprising last year which toppled autocrat Hosni Mubarak.

The opposition announced plans for an intensified street campaign of protests and civil disobedience and even a possible march on Morsi's presidential palace to prevent him from calling a nationwide referendum on the draft, which it must pass to come into effect. Top judges announced Friday they may refuse to monitor any referendum, rendering it invalid.

If a referendum is called, "we will go to him at the palace and topple him," insisted one protester, Yasser Said, a businessman who said he voted for Morsi in last summer's presidential election.

Islamists, however, are gearing up as well.

The Muslim Brotherhood, from which Morsi hails, drummed up supporters for its own mass rally today. Islamists boasted their turnout would show that the public supports the push by the country's first freely elected president to quickly bring a constitution and provide stability after nearly two years of turmoil.

The week-old crisis already has had clashes between the two camps that left two dead and hundreds injured. On Friday, Morsi opponents and supporters rained stones and firebombs on each other in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria and the southern city of Luxor.

The Islamist-led assembly that worked on the draft for months passed it in a rushed, 16-hour session that lasted until sunrise Friday.

The vote was abruptly moved up to pass the draft before Egypt's Constitutional Court rules Sunday whether to dissolve the assembly. Liberal, secular and Christian members and secular members had already quit the council to protest what they call Islamists' hijacking of the process.

Lebanese fighters killed in Syria

By Bassem Mroue
Associated Press

MASNAA, Lebanon – Syrian security forces killed as many as 20 Lebanese gunmen who were fighting alongside rebels in Syria on Friday, raising tensions amid mounting fears that the Syrian civil war is inflaming the region.

The Lebanese security officials said the gunmen were killed as they tried to enter the Syrian town of Tal Kalakh, near the Lebanese border. The officials asked that their names not be used because they were not authorized to speak publicly.

Syrian state-run media also reported that Lebanese gunmen were killed. But the SANA report said there were 17 — not 20 — fighters. The discrepancy could not immediately be reconciled.

The Lebanese gunmen were Sunni Muslims, as are the vast majority of Syria's rebels. Syrian President Bashar Assad — along with his most elite troops — belong to the Alawite sect, an offshoot of Shiite Islam.

Lebanon is particularly vulnerable to getting sucked into the conflict in Syria. The countries share a complex web of political and sectarian ties and rivalries that are easily inflamed. Lebanon, a country plagued by decades of strife, has been on edge since the uprising in Syria against Assad began in March 2011, with deadly clashes between pro- and anti-Assad Lebanese groups erupting on several occasions.

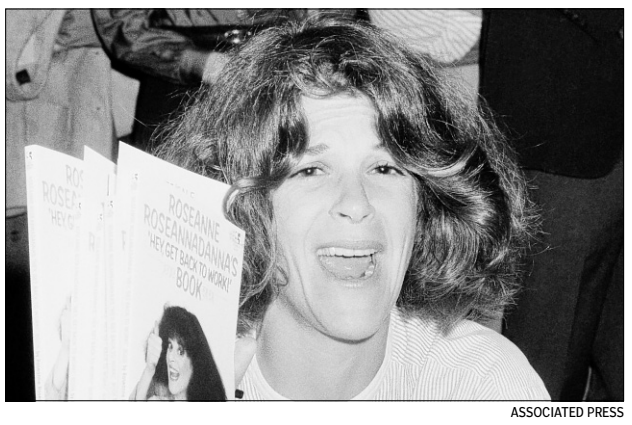

The deaths came as rebels have tried to close in on the Syrian capital, Damascus, in recent days. .

Some fans protesting Gilda's Club name change

■ Cancer center says her name lacks recognition among youth

By Scott Bauer and Dinesh Ramde

ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this Sept. 27, 1983 file photo, actress and comedienne Gilda Radner holds up copies of her book, "Roseanne Roseannadanna's "Hey, Get Back To Work," at a New York bookstore. The Madison, Wis.-area chapter of Gilda's Club is the latest to change its name to the Cancer Support Community, a move its director said was necessary because young people don't know who Radner was.

Bonnie Hanson polishes furniture in the "Baba Wawa" room at the former Gilda's Club in Middleton, Wis.

MIDDLETON, Wis. – Remember Roseanne Roseannadana? Or Emily Litella? Or Baba Wawa?

Younger generations might not recognize the characters popularized by comedienne Gilda Radner. Nor might they remember Radner herself, an original cast member of Saturday Night Live who died 23 years ago and for whom a national cancer support group is named.

That's troubling to the Madison-area chapter of Gilda's Club, which planned on Thursday to change its name in part because of concern that many don't know who Radner was. The move prompted outrage from some Radner fans, who see it as a slight to a woman who confronted cancer with dignity and humor, and led other chapters across the nation to hastily reaffirm they have absolutely no intention of changing their names.

Lannia Syren Stenz, the Madison-area club's executive director, said her organization decided to change its name to Cancer Support Community Southwest Wisconsin after it realized that most college students were born after Radner died in 1989.

"We are seeing younger and younger adults who are dealing with a cancer diagnosis," Stenz told the Wisconsin State Journal. "We want to make sure that what we are is clear to them and that there's not a lot of confusion that would cause people not to come in our doors."

Her comments angered some Radner fans, who let loose a storm of criticism on the organization's Facebook page.

"The only educating you're doing is teaching kids that when they die from cancer, their name will be erased from history in 20 years because the next generation doesn't know who they are. Way to give them hope!" wrote Mark Warneke, 44, a full-time college student in Arlington, Texas. He told the AP that taking Radner's name off the foundation was an insult to her memory.

Stenz referred questions from The Associated Press to Linda House, executive vice president of the national group. House said there was no evidence that young people are unfamiliar with Radner and the name change was motivated by the desire to make the organization's mission clear. She called Stenz's comments "not accurate, period."

"Gilda Radner is very much a part of the fiber of this organization," House said. "There has never been an intent and there is no intent to lose Gilda as part of the organization."

Radner, who was diagnosed with ovarian cancer in 1986, sought support from The Wellness Community in California and wrote about her experience in her book "It's Always Something," a reference to one of her characters' catch-phrases.

Her friends and family started Gilda's Club in 1991 on the East Coast to honor her legacy. The name was inspired by something Radner said after her diagnosis: "Having cancer gave me membership in an elite club I'd rather not belong to."

Gilda's Club Worldwide merged with The Wellness Community in 2009, and the joint headquarters in Washington changed its name to the Cancer Support Community. Local chapters were given the choice of keeping their names or switching to Cancer Support Community, House said.

The 56 chapters around the world deliver $40 million a year in free care to about 1 million cancer patients and their families, she said. Of those chapters, 20 are known as Gilda's Club, three are Wellness Community and 23 are Cancer Support Community.

Changing the chapters' names made sense to Ron Nief, a professor at Beloit College in southern Wisconsin who has made a career out of studying how different generations view the world differently. He said it could become harder for Gilda's Club to attract donations as fewer people remember seeing Radner on TV.

"I think we all want to keep our traditions alive," he said, "but there comes a reality in this case of what does this group represent and how do we raise money for it."

Radner's husband, actor Gene Wilder, said he didn't like the name change but he understood it.

He said if he had to break the news to his late wife she might ask, "Do they have to throw me out?"

"I'd say, 'It's not throwing you out, honey, it's getting more money.' And she'd say, 'OK, I guess if they have to, they have to,' " he said. "It's too bad. I wish it weren't so. But I understand."

The Wellness Center where Radner once sought support in Los Angeles was one of the groups that updated its name. Julia Forth, the marketing director of what's now called the Cancer Support Community Benjamin Center, said people who get sick Google the word cancer, so it helps to have that word in the name.

Other organizations were adamant about keeping the Gilda's Club name. LauraJane Hyde, who runs the Chicago chapter, said her group has spent 15 years teaching people that Radner's name was synonymous with cancer support, in the same way people know what Starbucks sells even though "coffee" isn't in its name.

"A lot of people feel very passionately about the name," she said. "We will lose donations if we change it."

Radner remains a strong presence at the Madison-area club even without her name on the building in the suburb of Middleton. Paintings and drawings of Radner line the walls. One depicts her on top of Madison's state Capitol. Another imagines her sitting along the shores of Lake Mendota on the University of Wisconsin-Madison campus.

The meeting rooms are named after her Saturday Night Live characters, including New York-street smart reporter Roseanne Roseannadana, out-of-sync editorialist Emily Litella and speech-impeded talk show host Baba Wawa, a parody of Barbara Walters.

Bangladesh fire echoes N.Y. tragedy

In this 1911 file photo provided by the National Archives, labor union members gather to protest and mourn the loss of life in the March 25, 1911 Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire in New York. The fire that raced through a garment factory on Saturday, Nov. 24, 2012 in Bangladesh and killed 112 workers bore eerie echoes of another inferno that burned more than a century ago: the Triangle Shirtwaist factory fire in New York City.

NEW YORK – Terrified women leaping to their deaths. Locked exits trapping workers. Piles of clothing blocking stairwells to safety.

The fire that raced through a garment factory in Bangladesh last week and killed 112 workers bore eerie echoes of another blaze more than a century ago: the Triangle Shirtwaist factory fire in New York City.

While the March 25, 1911, Triangle fire that killed 146 workers spurred the organized labor movement and led to workplace safety improvements, experts question whether the same will happen in Bangladesh.

"Profit and efficiency and competition always trump safety and health," said James Gross, a labor relations professor at Cornell University. "There's all this hoopla, and then not a lot happens after."

In Bangladesh, officials blamed the high death toll in part on the lack of an emergency exit in the eight-story building that housed Tazreen Fashions Ltd., a factory that made clothing for such U.S. retailers as Wal-Mart, Sears and Disney.

Likewise, Triangle survivors testified that as the fire raced through the top three floors of a 10-story building, a crucial door that would have helped many escape was locked.

Most of the workers at the Tazreen factory were women from the poorest region of the South Asian country. Young, poor immigrant women — mainly Jews and Italians — dominated the workforce at Triangle.

Stacks of yarn and clothes blocked part of the stairway in Bangladesh, and dozens of fire extinguishers in the building appeared unused.

At Triangle, the stairway was blocked by crates of blouses and other goods, and water buckets were not adequate to cope with the fire.

"All around me the others were screaming and hollering," Triangle worker Celia Saltz Pollack recalled later as part of a project to interview survivors.

"The door was locked and I pushed over to the door of the elevator. When the elevator stopped on our floor, I was swept into it by the pushing crowd."

A state commission convened in response to the Triangle fire drafted 20 laws aimed at improving workplace safety, including requirements for fire drills, occupancy limits in buildings and clearly posted exit signs.

"I'm heartsick. It's tragic," said Suzanne Pred Bass, the great-niece of Katie Weiner, who survived the Triangle fire, and of Rose Weiner, who did not. "It's not just reminiscent; it is the same event replayed again."

Bass said what breaks her heart is the fact that she hasn't seen the same degree of public outrage that followed the Triangle fire.

"I think we need, in this country, to have a boycott of Bangladesh clothing until their factories are safe," she said. "Until their unions are protected."

But unions are scarce in third-world countries like Bangladesh, where workers have few protections, said Ethan Snow, a spokesman for Unite Here, a union that represents garment and textile workers in the U.S.

"The reason why these major companies have moved to these countries is because there are no unions," Snow said. "And because there is no democratic process on the shop floor for workers."

The fire has drawn attention to a problem that labor groups, retailers and governments have known for years: Bangladesh's fast-growing garment industry — second only to China's in exports — is rife with dangerous workplaces. More than 300 workers there have died in fires since 2006.

The country annually earns about $20 billion from exports of garment products, mainly to the U.S. and Europe.

Labor Minister Rajiuddin Ahmed Raju said Thursday that factories without emergency exits — or with only one such exit — will be forced to close until they upgrade their safety infrastructure.

The factory's owner, Delwar Hossain, said he was never informed the facility was required to have an emergency exit.

"It was my fault. But nobody told me that there was no emergency exit, which could be made accessible from outside," Delwar Hossain was quoted Thursday as telling The Daily Star newspaper.

"Nobody even advised me to install one like that, apart from the existing ones."

Nazma Akhter, president of the Bangladesh Combined Garment Workers Federation trade union, called for the arrest of the factory's owners and management to send a message to the industry as a whole.

Companies that do business with local factories need to feel some pressure, according to the Center for Safety and Health Sustainability and the American Society of Safety Engineers, two groups that are doing research on worker safety.

"It's not enough to condemn local factory owners for these conditions and to expect long term change," said Thomas Cecich, a vice president of the sustainability group, in a statement Thursday.

"The corporations that source supply chain products, as well as their stakeholders, have tremendous power to influence the conditions in which supply chain workers operate."

Congress again looks at doing away with $1 bill

By Kevin Freking
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American consumers have shown about as much appetite for the $1 coin as kids do their spinach. They may not know what's best for them either. Congressional auditors say doing away with dollar bills entirely and replacing them with dollar coins could save taxpayers some $4.4 billion over the next 30 years.

Vending machine operators have long championed the use of $1 coins because they don't jam the machines, cutting down on repair costs and lost sales. But most people don't seem to like carrying them. In the past five years, the U.S. Mint has produced 2.4 billion presidential $1 coins. Most are stored by the Federal Reserve, and production was suspended about a year ago.

The latest projection from the Government Accountability Office on the potential savings from switching to dollar coins entirely comes as lawmakers begin exploring new ways for the government to save money by changing the money itself.

The Mint is preparing a report for Congress showing how changes in the metal content of coins could save money.

The last time the government made major metallurgical changes in U.S. coins was nearly 50 years ago when Congress directed the Mint to remove silver from dimes and quarters and to reduce its content in half dollar coins. Now, Congress is looking at new changes in response to rising prices for copper and nickel.

At a House subcommittee hearing Thursday, the focus was on two approaches:

■ Moving to less expensive combinations of metals like steel, aluminum and zinc.

■ Gradually taking dollar bills out the economy and replacing them with coins.

The GAO's Lorelei St. James told the House Financial Services panel it would take several years for the benefits of switching from paper bills to dollar coins to catch up with the cost of making the change. Equipment would have to be bought or overhauled and more coins would have to be produced upfront to replace bills as they are taken out of circulation.

But over the years, the savings would begin to accrue, she said, largely because a $1 coin could stay in circulation for 30 years while paper bills have to be replaced every four or five years on average.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

CHICAGO — Grains futures mostly fell Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for March delivery fell 22 cents to $8.6350 a bushel; March corn fell 6 cents to $7.5275 a bushel; March oats rose 0.25 cent to $3.7875 a bushel; while January soybeans fell 9.25 cents to $14.3875 a bushel.

Beef and pork futures fell on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

February live cattle fell 1.70 cent to $1.3040 a pound; January feeder cattle fell 1.13 cent to $1.4562 a pound; while February lean hogs fell 0.20 cent to 86.92 cents a pound.

COMMODITIES

The price of coffee plummeted 3.7 percent Friday on expectations that bountiful harvests in Brazil and Central America will add to already ample global supplies.

Coffee for March delivery fell 5.8 cents to end at $1.506 per pound. The price has fallen nearly 34 percent this year, largely on predictions that Brazil's harvest will be robust.

Crop development in Brazil has been good while Central America's harvest is getting under way, Jack Scoville, vice president at Price Futures Group, said in an email.

Meanwhile, political wrangling over the "fiscal cliff" pushed prices lower for most commodities. Many investors are staying out of the market until they have a better idea about whether the Obama administration and Congress can agree on a new budget by the end of the year.

Automatic government spending cuts and steep tax increases will take effect Jan. 1 unless an agreement is reached. Economists believe that could push the U.S. back into a recession, which would cut demand for commodities.

Gold for February delivery fell $16.80 to finish at $1,712.70 per ounce. March silver dropped $1.152, or 3.3 percent, to $33.279 per ounce and January platinum fell $14.90 to $1,604.60 per ounce. March copper rose 4.45 cents to $3.65 per pound and March palladium rose 75 cents to $688.20 per ounce.

Benchmark oil rose 84 cents to end at $88.91 per barrel, heating oil was essentially flat at $3.0413 per gallon, wholesale gasoline fell 2.56 cents to $2.7614 per gallon and natural gas dropped 8.7 cents, or 2.4 percent, to $3.561 per 1,000 cubic feet.

In March agricultural crop contracts, wheat fell 22 cents, or 2.5 percent, to end at $8.635 per bushel and corn dropped 6 cents to $7.5275 per bushel. January soybeans fell 9.25 cents to $14.3875 per bushel.

German auto supplier opening plant in Murray

FRANKFORT — The German automotive supplier iwis (EE'-vis) is planning to open a manufacturing plant in Murray, creating 75 jobs in the western Kentucky city.

Gov. Steve Beshear joined company officials to make that announcement on Friday. It will be the firm's first manufacturing plant in the U.S.

Beshear said the $12.5 million investment was the result of an economic mission he made to Germany earlier this year.

Beshear said in a statement that he's thrilled iwis decided to open a plant in Kentucky, which is home to Ford, Toyota and General Motors manufacturing plants and hundreds of related businesses employing more than 70,000 people.

The Kentucky Economic Development Finance Authority has preliminarily approved a package of tax incentives worth $2.5 million for the company.

Consumer spending down in October

WASHINGTON — Americans cut back on spending last month and saw no growth in their income, reflecting disruptions from Superstorm Sandy that could hold back economic growth in the final months of the year.

The Commerce Department said Friday that consumer spending dropped 0.2 percent in October. That's down from an increase of 0.8 percent in September and the weakest showing since May.

The government said work interruptions caused by the storm reduced wages and salaries by about $18 billion at an annual rate. The storm affected 24 states, with the most severe damage in New York and New Jersey.

Port strike in fourth day

LOS ANGELES — A strike at the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach entered its fourth day on Friday despite efforts to end the walkout that has idled most of the nation's busiest cargo complex.

Seven of eight terminals in Los Angeles and three of six in Long Beach were closed to cargo container traffic as dockworkers refused to cross picket lines set up by union clerical workers who claim shippers are outsourcing their jobs.

There were a handful of picketers at each terminal on Friday, said Phillip Sanfield, Los Angeles port spokesman.

Combined, Los Angeles and Long Beach handle 40 percent of the nation's import trade

At least 18 cargo ships have been unable to load or unload since workers began the strike on Tuesday.

A handful of vessels that were anchored offshore apparently left for other ports, Sanfield said.

Indiana financier sentenced for fraud

INDIANAPOLIS — An Indiana financier and the onetime chief executive of National Lampoon has been sentenced to 50 years in prison for swindling investors out of about $200 million.

U.S. District Judge Jane Magnus-Stinson sentenced Timothy Durham on Friday following his convictions in June on charges of securities fraud, conspiracy and 10 counts of wire fraud.

Prosecutors sought a life sentence for Durham after a probation report recommended a sentence of 225 years.

Durham's attorney sought a sentence of three years in prison and two years of home detention.

The government accused Durham and two co-conspirators of stripping Akron, Ohio-based Fair Finance of its assets and using the money to buy mansions, classic cars and other luxury items and to keep another Durham company afloat.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY: By Gary Puryear
"NO FOOLIN"
It is sad but true, most humans are easily deceived. Since we don't know the mind of others our judgment of others based on what they do may be a false read. There is a word that has spanned the centuries that describes those who pretend to be something they are not. The Greek word "Hupocrites" was transliterated into our English word "hypocrite". It is a word that originally was used to describe an actor on a stage asking a question to another person who was unseen to give the answer. It later was used simply to refer to the actor on a stage who was pretending to be someone he was not. Jesus condemned people for being like actors on the stage of life. Some of his most harsh words were against such individuals (Matthew 23:13,14, 15, 23,25,27,29). Later in Matthew 24:51 Jesus said, "And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." A person may go through life fooling everybody he meets but he can't fool God. Our heavenly Father and our Savior knows the very thoughts of each of us. Some pretend so they can make earthly gain, others so they can be more popular. Jesus condemnation in Matthew 23 was against the Jewish religious leaders. Even if the pretense is done in the name of religion it is still sinful. While one may get away with deception on earth the judgment will reveal the truth. We must lay aside all "hypocrisies" (I Peter 2:1) because there is "no foolin" God.

ability to block legislation in their chamber in the new Congress that convenes in January.

"Any bill that reaches a Republican-led House based on Senate Democrats' heavy-handed power play would be dead on arrival," he warned.

In the talks to date, Democrats have declined to identify a single spending cut they are willing to support, while Republicans avoid specifics on revenue increases they would swallow.

Once each side moves beyond opening gambits, Republicans will have to decide whether they are willing to raise income tax rates on upper incomes, as Obama wants, or hold fast to closing loopholes as a means of producing increased tax revenue.

For their part, Democrats will decide how much savings to pull from benefit programs like Medicare, Medicaid and possibly Social Security without cutting guaranteed benefits, a line they vowed not to cross in earlier budget negotiations.

Obama's opening proposal, delivered to Boehner and other Republicans by Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner on Thursday, calls for $1.6 trillion in higher taxes over a decade, hundreds of billions of dollars in new spending, a possible extension of the temporary Social Security payroll tax cut and enhancing the president's power to raise the national debt limit.

The new federal revenue would include $950 billion generated by raising taxes on families with incomes over $250,000 and by closing certain tax loopholes by the end of this year, according to administration officials who described the offer Friday only on condition of anonymity. The remainder would be achieved through an overhaul of the tax system next year and would not become effective until 2014, said the officials, who were not authorized to provide the details by name.

Obama is seeking new spending to help the unemployed, homeowners whose property's value is less than their mortgage, doctors who treat Medicare patients and wage-earners.

In exchange, the president would back cuts of an unspecified amount this year, and savings of as much $400 billion from Medicare and other benefit programs in 2013.

The White House plan also counts about $1 trillion in spending cuts agreed to last year, as well as about $800 billion that the administration claims as savings because of the drawdown of troops from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Republicans said they were surprised at the plan, and Democrats wondered aloud why.

"Each side said they'd submit a down payment. We have. Our preference is revenue. What is theirs?" said Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y.

Republicans have an opening offer of their own, in line with their conservative anti-tax views, much as Obama's is designed to solidify his own political position. While agreeing to new revenue, GOP lawmakers want to extend expiring income tax cuts at all levels, including the top brackets. They also want to raise the age of eligibility for Medicare and curtail future cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security and other benefit programs. The same adjustment would raise revenue for the government by making a change in annual adjustments of tax brackets.

"We're the only ones with a balanced plan to protect the economy, protect American jobs and protect the middle class from the fiscal cliff," Boehner said on Friday.

That was a jab at Obama, who campaigned for re-election advocating a balanced approach to avoiding the fiscal cliff that combines higher taxes on the wealthy with spending cuts.

Said the president: "In Washington, nothing's easy, so there is going to be some prolonged negotiations."

Israel says it will build more homes on West Bank

By Aron Heller and Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel responded swiftly Friday to U.N. recognition of a Palestinian state, revealing it will build 3,000 more homes for Jews on Israeli-occupied lands that the world body overwhelmingly said belong to the Palestinians.

The plans also include future construction in a strategic area of the West Bank where critics have long warned that Jewish settlements would kill hopes for a viable Palestinian state.

Israel's moves served as a harsh reminder to Palestinians — euphoric over the U.N. upgrade — that while they now have a state on paper, most of it remains very much under Israeli control.

"This is a doomsday scenario," Daniel Seidemann of Ir Amim, a group that promotes coexistence in Jerusalem, said of the building plans.

Israel's decision was bound to embarrass the United States, which was among just nine countries in the 193-member General Assembly to vote against accepting Palestine as a nonmember observer state.

Accelerated settlement construction could also set a more confrontational tone as Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas weighs his next moves.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland criticized the Israeli announcement. "These actions are counterproductive and make it harder to resume direct negotiations or achieve a two-state solution," she said.

when needed.

So what is the primary maintenance issue for the school system?

"It's a toss up between heating and air problems and plumbing issues. When you have over 7,000 students, you're going to have some problems ...," Taylor said.

Here are more fun facts.

Did you know that the maintenance department is in charge of keeping an estimated 1,500 gallons of Windex or other glass cleaners in stock for use at the school district's buildings?

What about other essentials?

Who makes sure there are paper towels available in the bathrooms? That's right, the maintenance staff. They order approximately 10,000 rolls of paper towels annually.

In addition, with a student population of about 7,000, not to mention school district staff, the maintenance department ensures there is enough toilet paper to go around. The definition of enough toilet paper for this population is somewhere between 8,000 and 10,000 rolls for the nine months that school is in session.

"I was a building contractor before I came here, and I never thought I'd ever care how many paper towels a person uses or rolls of toilet paper, " he said.

The maintenance staff works through the summer, Taylor said.

"We use that time to catch up and go beyond putting out fires," he said.

They are on call 24/7. They have to be. Because the maintenance crew faces challenges like what happened the year the sprinkler system at Spottsville Elementary School broke and flooded the building.

"We had 2 to 3 inches of water throughout the school," Taylor said. "We were out of school anyway because of snow. But the students only missed one day of school because of the flooding. Within a week, we had all the flooring replaced."

The staff put in "quite a bit" of hours to complete the task, in addition to hiring subcontractors to help lay the flooring. "Some were grumpy by the end of the week, but there was no real complaining," Taylor said.

"We played musical furniture that week," he said. "It worked out well. Someone was looking out for us ..."

When someone is hired as part of the maintenance staff, Taylor said, they usually stay until retirement.

"The average number of years among the staff right now is 18," he said.

"It's a good place to work. A lot of people don't realize the impact of what we do has on our kids. If there isn't heat or air in the schools, what are they going to do? If there's no plumbing, what are they going to do?" Taylor said.

"There is no job more important than the other. It all has to work to keep the (school) system" running.

making music.

As early as 1903 she was assisting with local organ recitals, and then there was the 1924 formation of the Henderson Music Club, which organized recitals, pageants and concerts.

Taylor was the first elected president of the club that eventually created an annual Christmas Candlelight Service.

Some believe the first Christmas Candlelight Service took place in 1931, and others think it was even earlier.

Performers at the candlelight service were at first "made up of the club chorus members, but later it was extended to members of the church choirs and still later to include school choral groups," according to a Sept. 5, 1956, article in The Gleaner.

That latter tradition continues today.

The Henderson Music Club dissolved about 20 years ago, but the candlelight service continues to make music because of volunteers who did not want to see the tradition fade away.

This year's service will begin with an organ prelude by First United Methodist's music director Matthew Vanover that will include "From Heaven Above to Earth I Come," by Anton Wilhelm Leupold; "Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme" and "Nun komm' der Heiden Heiland" by Johann Sebastian Bach; "Away in a Manger;" two versions of "Good Christian Friends, Rejoice" and Offertory in C Minor Christmas Carols by Alexandre Guilmant.

In addition to two congregational hymns ("Hark! the Herald Angels Sing" and "Silent Night)" and the reading of the Christmas story from the second chapter of the book of Luke, there will be several other selections of music.

They include "Celtic Advent Carol" and "The Angels' Carol" sung by the First Singers Chamber ensemble of First UMC; "Rise Up Shepherd" sung by baritone Mike Nation accompanied by Heather McCormick; "Nativity Carol" sung by sopranos Beth Hayes and Jessica Vanover accompanied by Matthew Vanover; "O Holy Night" sung by baritone John Charles Watkins accompanied by Mike Nation; "Ave Maria" sung by soprano Karen Morris accompanied by Jonathan Hauke; and "Sing We Now of Christmas" and "Carol of the Bells" sung by the North Middle School Glee Club directed by Lauren Taylor.

The public is invited. The church is located at 338 Third Street, and guests can enter through the portico doors on the Second and Green streets side of the building.

JACKPOT
from 1A

ticket had been sold at a Trex Mart gas station and convenience store on the edge of town, and Mark Hill's name circulated quickly. While he and his wife did not speak to reporters, friends and relatives identified Mark Hill as the winner.

Myron Anderson, pastor of the Baptist Church in nearby Camden Point, said he heard Thursday that the Hills had won the huge lottery prize. Anderson said he has known Mark Hill since they attended high school together and that the couple have older children and a younger elementary school-age daughter.

"He's a really nice guy, and I know his wife, and they have this nice little adopted daughter that they went out of their way to adopt," Anderson said. Funeral services for Hill's father were at the Baptist church, but the family attends church elsewhere, he said.

"I hope it's good news for them," Anderson said. "I've heard awful horror stories about people who get all that money in their lap and how everybody treats them, and if you don't mind me saying, I mean just the fact that the press is going to be after them."

Kevin Bryan, a lifelong Dearborn resident, said the only other local lottery winner he could remember was a farmer who won about $100,000 in scratch-off game years ago "and bought himself a combine."

The winning ticket sold in Arizona was purchased at a 4 Sons Food Store in Fountain Hills near Phoenix, state lottery officials said.

In a Mega Millions drawing in March, three ticket buyers shared a $656 million jackpot, the largest lottery payout of all time.

Hill and the holder of the Arizona winning ticket have numerous decisions ahead, including how to accept their new wealth. The cash payout from the overall jackpot has been estimated at about $385 million, or about $192.5 million for each ticket. The winners can take their jackpots in lump sums or annual payments.

Cats learn another lesson from loss

■ Kentucky will try to get back on track today against Baylor

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kentucky's John Calipari believes tough losses come with the territory when coaching a young team.

Like Thursday's 64-50 loss to Notre Dame.

Talented freshmen are nothing new for Calipari, but the inexperience of his No. 8 showed against the Fighting Irish. Freshmen Alex Poythress and Archie Goodwin, who entered the game averaging a combined 37.4 points per game, finished with just six points between them.

Kentucky's second loss of the young season was much like its first.

The Wildcat youngsters were outmatched by another more-seasoned group. In the Wildcats' 75-68 loss to No. 2 Duke earlier this month, Calipari pointed to several attention lapses that the veteran Blue Devils exploited.

The loss also reinforced the coach's assessment of being "a November basketball team."

"We stopped playing, didn't compete," Calipari said Friday. "We didn't come up with 50-50 balls, didn't play for one another. We kind of separated a little bit, but that's the first road game and I knew we'd struggle, but I thought we'd compete. That's the surprising thing. We just didn't battle them."

The Wildcats had a Friday walk-through and film session to reflect on mistakes they hope to correct on Saturday when they host Baylor (4-2). The Bears are facing similar early season issues with young players after losing three starters from last year's Elite Eight squad that lost to Kentucky in the regional final.

Kentucky vs. Baylor

In addition, Baylor shooting guard Brady Heslip missed last Saturday's 63-59 loss to College of Charleston after an emergency appendectomy. Bears coach Scott Drew said Heslip's availability against the WIldcats will be a game-time decision.

Calipari has different issues with his lineup.

The Wildcats are healthy for the most part, but Calipari is still trying to figure out how to use his two big freshmen — 6-foot-11 Nerlens Noel and 7-footer Willie Cauley-Stein — together on offense.

He also wants to use Goodwin at shooting guard instead of at the point and reduce his jump-shooting and fast-break scoring opportunities. Kentucky's half-court defense is also an issue.

Notre Dame coach Mike Brey expects Calipari to have all of those matters addressed in short time.

"I'm glad we played them now," Brey said, "because they're really young and talented, and they're going to be better in January and February."

Calipari said it's possible Kentucky will get better, but it's not a given.

"I keep hearing, 'Cal's teams always get better as the year goes on and they'll be at their best,'" Calipari said. "Well, that's if you really work. If you fall in love with practice and improvement, if you're in love with that, we're going to get better.

"I like my team. But if we don't, I don't have a magic wand."

Lady Cols pummel Panthers

■ Running clock employed in Henderson County's 68-16 rout of Daviess County

By Kevin Patton

For a 52-point blowout, Henderson County's 68-16 home-opening win over Daviess County had its moments of suspense.

The outcome was never in doubt as the Lady Colonels scored the first 25 points, but fans at Colonel Gym were left wondering if the Lady Panthers would ever score or how the newly-instituted mercy rule would work.

Senior forward Ellie Fruit equaled her career high with 29 points as she hit five 3-pointers in Friday's win.

Daviess County (1-1) opened the game in a zone defense causing Fruit and the Lady Colonels' other outside shooters' eyes to light up. "I get excited," Fruit said of seeing a zone defense. "Me and Maci (Brown) were like 'we're ready to shoot the threes.'"

Fruit, who scored 22 points in the first half, had three of her trifectas in the first quarter. Brown added three more, while Kacie Wallace hit one in the second half.

The Lady Colonels made improvements on the offensive end following Thursday's 47-30 victory at Evansville Memorial.

"We didn't play well last night against the sagging man, which was similar to a zone. We wanted to get better ball movement tonight, and I thought we did," Henderson County coach Jeff Haile. "We got off some good shots and Ellie had the hot hand. The way we moved the ball around, we got some open looks for her and Maci too."

MIKE LAWRENCE/THE GLEANER

Henderson County's Samantha Carter looks for the net as she drives the baseline under defensive pressure from Daviess County's Brooke Lewis, left, and Rachel Holland during their game on Friday evening at Colonel Gym. Henderson County rolled to a 68-16 victory.

While the offense was improved, it was the still the defense that was the driving force for the Lady Colonels. Daviess County shot 24 percent from the field (6-of-25) and committed 24 turnovers against Henderson County's pressure.

"We kept them off balance with the pressure, and that's what we're going to have to do," Haile said.

Even when the defense wasn't creating turnovers, it was forcing the Lady Panthers to rush their decisions and hurry their shots.

"That's what our press does. It gets in their heads," said Fruit, who equaled the 29 points she scored last season in a 73-55 win over Calloway County.

Daviess County missed its first nine shots from the field as well as two free throws and had committed 10 turnovers before finally getting on the board at the 5:56 mark of the second quarter on a basket Nicole Ward that started an 11-2 run by the Lady Panthers.

Daviess County would score only one field goal in the second half, that coming with 0:47 to go play. The Lady Panthers' 16 points were the fewest by a Henderson County opponent since a 58-14 win over Union County in 1993.

With a mercy rule in place this season when the margin reaches 35 points, the Lady Colonels hit the magic number with 3:40 left in the third quarter. The clock was only stopped between periods, during timeouts and during free throws.

Brown was the only other player to score in double figures as she totaled 11 points.

Henderson County won the junior varsity game 34-23. Alisha Owens led the JV Lady Colonels (2-0) with 17 points.

The Lady Colonels host Castle Tuesday in their next contest.

Webster Co. girls thump Dawson for second win

Gleaner staff

DIXON — Mariah Herrera scored 16 points to lead the Webster County Lady Trojans to a 70-26 victory over Dawson Springs on Friday night.

The Lady Trojans (2-0) took command by outscoring Dawson Springs 29-5 in the second quarter.

A running clock was used throughout the second half as the mercy rule was put into effect.

Kolbi Edens added 14 points for Webster and Darrian McNary scored 13.

Elizabeth Black led Dawson Springs with 14 points.

Mayfield claims ninth state title

The Associated Press

BOWLING GREEN — Mayfield's Jonathon Jackson totaled 334 yards and four touchdowns as the Cardinals cruised past Ashland Fairview 55-8 in the Kentucky high school Class A state championship Friday in Bowling Green.

It was Mayfield's ninth state title and second in three years.

Jackson, a senior running back/linebacker, ran 19 times for 278 yards and three scores, caught one pass for 56 yards and a touchdown and tallied five tackles on defense.

Mayfield quarterback Jake Guhy was 7-of-14 passing for 175 yards and two touchdowns.

Overall the Cardinals gained 544 yards of total offense.

Mayfield forced Fairview into eight fumbles, recovering five of them.

Mayfield's Jordon Brown (3) outruns Fairview's Mason Rutherford (17) during the KHSAA Class A state championship game on Friday in Bowling Green. Mayfield won 55-8.

Fairview's Chris Brewer ran 16 times for 148 yards. Fellow running back Devon Turner added 47 yards on nine carries.

■ Lou. Central 12, Belfry 6: Louisville Central quarterback Sydney Tedford hit receiver Marcel Malone with a 15-yard touchdown pass in overtime to give the Yellowjackets a 12-6 victory over Belfry in the Class 3-A state championship game on Friday.

Central won its fifth title in six years, the third straight time the Yellowjackets have beaten the Pirates in the final.

The touchdown pass came after Central's defense stopped Belfry on fourth down on its overtime possession.

Tedford finished the day 3-of-7 passing for 33 yards with the TD. Malone's touchdown was his lone reception of the day.

Belfry running back Austin Hatfield rushed for 105 yards on 19 carries in the loss.

■ Highlands 47, Collins 0: Donovan McCoy passed for two touchdowns and ran for two more as Fort Thomas Highlands defeated Collins 47-0 Friday night in the Class 4-A state championship game.

The Bluebirds (14-1), who set state records by clinching their sixth straight championship and 22nd overall title, accumulated 476 total yards, including 323 on the ground.

Highlands got the win despite the absence of longtime coach Dale Mueller, who was in New York because of a family death. Defensive coordinator Brian Weinrich filled in for Mueller.

Cols will hit the road to face John Hardin today

Gleaner staff

Henderson County faces defending Fifth Region champion John Hardin today in the Corky Cox Classic at Larue County.

The Colonels (1-0) opened the season Tuesday with a 64-45 win at Evansville Memorial.

Today's game is the season-opener for John Hardin, which finished 23-9 last year and reached the quarterfinals of the Sweet 16.

The Bulldogs are led by senior point guard Brandon Price, who averaged 18.6 points and 6.5 assists per game last year.

The other games in today's event include Evangel Christian against Green County at 2:30 p.m. and Madisonville taking on the host school at 6 p.m. The Henderson County-John Hardin game tips at 4 p.m. Central time.

Also today, Union County (2-0) takes on Breckinridge County at noon Central time in the 11th District Tipoff Classic.

Henderson Co. vs. John Hardin
Corky Cox Classic
Site: LaRue Co. High School, Hodgenville
Tipoff: 4 p.m. Central
Records: Henderson Co., 1-0; John Hardin, 0-0
Directions: Take the Audubon Parkway to Owensboro and then the Natcher Parkway south to the West Kentucky Parkway. Take the WK Parkway east until it ends in Elizabethtown and becomes KY-61 South. Proceed approximately 11 miles. Turn left on US-31E in Hodgenville and the school will be on the right.

Bonds, Clemens shutout likely

NEW YORK – Baseball's all-time home run king and the most decorated pitcher likely will be shut out of the Hall of Fame in January. A survey by The Associated Press shows that Barry Bonds and Roger Clemens, as well as slugger Sammy Sosa, don't have enough votes to get into Cooperstown.

With steroid scandals still very much on the minds of longtime members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America as they cast their ballots, the trio failed to muster even 50 percent support among the 112 voters contacted by the AP — nearly one-fifth of those eligible to choose.

Candidates need 75 percent for election

Mets, Wright make new deal

NEW YORK – The face of the New York Mets plans to stick around for quite a while.

All-Star third baseman David Wright and the Mets agreed Friday to a $138 million, eight-year contract, a person familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press.

The deal, the richest in franchise history, replaces Wright's $16 million salary for next season and includes $122 million in new money, the person said, speaking on condition of anonymity because the agreement was not yet final.

A homegrown fan favorite, Wright is the club's career leader in several major offensive categories including hits, RBIs, runs and walks.

Rivera, Yanks finalize deal

NEW YORK – As promised, Mariano Rivera is staying with the New York Yankees for another season.

After missing most of the season because of a knee injury, Rivera accepted a cut in guaranteed money when he finalized a $10 million, one-year contract Friday.

The all-time saves leader, who turned 43 on Thursday, took a cut from his $30 million deal that had covered the last two years. But he can earn an additional $500,000 if he is MVP of the league championship series, $1 million if he is MVP of the World Series and $1 million if he wins the Rolaids Relief Award.

Big Ben out of Ravens game

PITTSBURGH – For the third consecutive game, the Steelers will be without their star quarterback. At least it appears as if they'll have the quarterback of their defense and the reigning team MVP back on the field.

Ben Roethlisberger will not play Sunday in Baltimore, meaning Charlie Batch will make his second consecutive start at quarterback for the Steelers (6-5), who have lost each of the first two games Roethlisberger missed.

Unlike a defeat at home two weeks ago to the rival Ravens (9-2) and an upset loss this past Sunday in Cleveland, however, the Steelers likely will have safety Troy Polamalu and receiver Antonio Brown in uniform and active.

Parker planning to attend college

CHICAGO – Top high school basketball recruit Jabari Parker says he will attend college and not go on a Mormon mission after he graduates.

Parker, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, previously mentioned the possibility of doing mission work after graduation from Chicago's Simeon Career Academy. During an appearance Friday on ESPN Radio, Parker said he will be going to college next year.

'That's what you live for'

■ Banged-up Bridgewater leads Cardinals to BCS bowl berth

Wire reports

Teddy Bridgewater had a brace on his arm and a protective boot on his foot after the game. He said that while he was playing, the sore ankle hurt more than the broken wrist.

Louisville's star sophomore quarterback didn't know how much he would play against Rutgers and wasn't well enough to start. When it became apparent that the Cardinals couldn't beat Rutgers without him, he decided it was time to go.

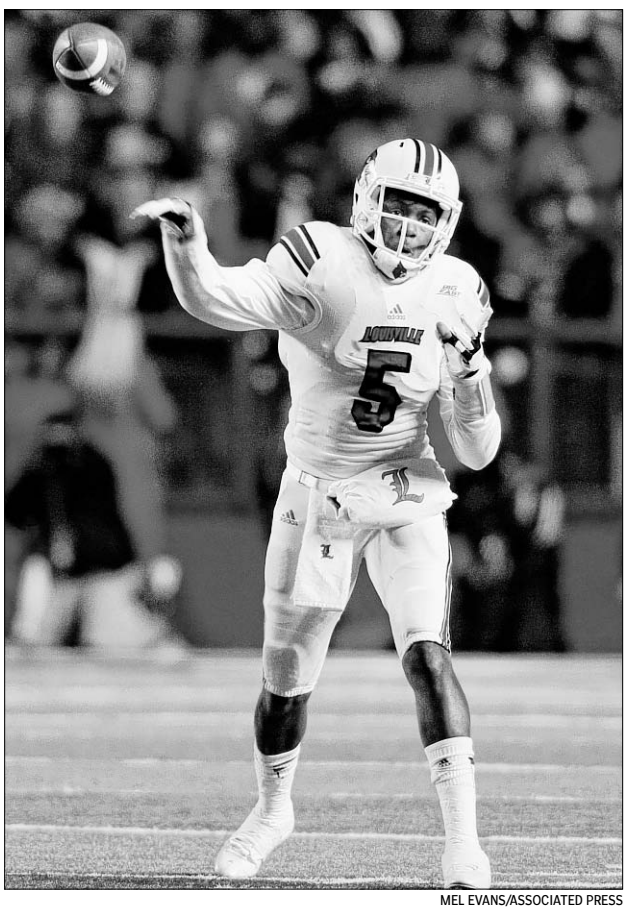

Bridgewater came off the bench to throw two-second half touchdown passes, and John Wallace kicked a 29-yard field goal with 1:41 left to give Louisville a 20-17 victory against Rutgers on Thursday night in what was essentially the Big East championship game.

"That what you live for, you live for the big moments," Bridgewater said.

In a game between one team headed to the Big Ten and another bound for the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Big East handed out its second-to-last BCS bid to a school that entered the league during its first massive rebuild in 2005 and watched its athletic program blossom.

The Cardinals will be going to the BCS for the second time. Either the Orange or Sugar Bowl will be the destination.

"We dropped two the last couple weeks. But for us to go on the road and win the championship, it's so special," said third-year coach Charlie Strong, who has quickly gotten Louisville back on track after the Cardinals hit a rough patch following their only other BCS bid in 2006.

MEL EVANS/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Louisville quarterback Teddy Bridgewater (5) throws a pass during the second half against Rutgers in Piscataway, N.J., on Thursday night. Louisville won 20-17.

"I'm just so happy for us to get a 10-win season, go win the conference title and get us to a BCS bowl."

Louisville (10-2, 5-2) will share this Big East title with Rutgers (9-3, 5-2), Syracuse and possibly even Cincinnati, but those guys only get a banner. The Cardinals get the ticket to the big game. The BCS standings will be used to break the tie and there is no doubt Louisville, with the best overall record in the conference, will be on top.

Bridgewater didn't start a week after breaking his left wrist and spraining his right ankle in a loss to Connecticut.

"He's the toughest quarterback in the nation," Louisville linebacker Preston Brown said.

Strong went with senior Will Stein as the starter because Bridgewater could only take snaps from the shotgun. But it quickly became apparent Louisville could not win without its star quarterback.

■ Northern Illinois 44, Kent State 37: Jordan Lynch ran for three touchdowns, including a 2-yarder in the second overtime, and Demetrius Stone's interception in the end zone gave No. 19 Northern Illinois a 44-37 victory over No. 18 Kent State in a stirring Mid-American Conference championship game Friday night.

Both teams were hoping a win would boost them into the top 16 of the BCS rankings and give them a berth in one of college football's marquee bowls. Northern Illinois (12-1) dominated for much of the night, but the Golden Flashes (11-2) tied it at 34 in the final minute of regulation.

■ Stanford 27, UCLA 24: Kevin Hogan threw for 155 yards and a touchdown and ran for 47 yards and another score to help eighth-ranked Stanford beat No. 17 UCLA 27-24 in the Pac-12 championship game Friday night.

As a defender barreled into him, Hogan hurled a 26-yard tying touchdown to Drew Terrell on third-and-15 early in the fourth quarter. Jordan Williamson kicked his second field goal from 36 yards with 6:49 remaining for the go-ahead score to seal Stanford's first conference title since the 1999 season.

Louisville posting up little-used big men

Wire reports

Louisville's Zach Price and Stephan Van Treese a week ago spent most of the game watching their teammates play.

Now they're holding down the middle for the No. 5 Cardinals (5-1).

With starting center Gorgui Dieng sidelined until January with a broken left wrist he suffered eight days ago, the two reserves are getting extended minutes.

Price and Treese enter Saturday's game against Illinois State averaging a combined 3.0 points and 5.1 rebounds per game. That's a drop-off from Dieng's 8.2 points and 8.0 rebounds.

Louisville coach Rick Pitino doesn't expect them to replace Dieng, and doesn't want them to try. He hopes that each focuses on creating their own inside niche. Whether they do will likely depend on how much confidence they develop from being in the fray.

"I'm very confident in them, but they're not Gorgui," Pitino said Friday. "They'll do a good job. But it's up to Chane Behanan and Wayne Blackshear and Luke Hancock and Kevin Ware to pick up their games to a higher level because you can't make up for Gorgui with Zach and Stephan."

Saturday will mark the second game with extensive playing time for 6-foot-10 sophomore Price and 6-9 senior Van Treese.

Dieng was injured in Louisville's semifinal victory over Missouri at the Battle 4 Atlantis tournament in the Bahamas.

■ Georgetown 37, Tennessee 36: Georgetown and Tennessee held each other scoreless over the final four minutes, and the No. 20 Hoyas beat the Volunteers 37-36 in a display of abysmal shooting Friday night in the SEC/Big East Challenge.

■ Syracuse 91, Arkansas 82: James Southerland scored a career-high 35 points to lead No. 6 Syracuse to a 91-82 win over Arkansas on Friday night.

■ Kansas 84, Oregon State 78: Ben McLemore scored 21 points, Travis Releford added 20 and No. 10 Kansas held off repeated Oregon State rallies to beat the Beavers 84-78 on Friday night.

Spurs fined by the NBA for sending stars home

Wire reports

The NBA fined the San Antonio Spurs $250,000 on Friday for sending four players home Thursday before their game Thursday night in Miami.

Commissioner David Stern said in a statement that the Spurs "did a disservice to the league and our fans" when they didn't bring Tim Duncan, Tony Parker, Manu Ginobili or Danny Green to Miami for the final game of their six-game road trip.

"The result here is dictated by the totality of the facts in this case," Stern said. "The Spurs decided to make four of their top players unavailable for an early-season game that was the team's only regular-season visit to Miami. The team also did this without informing the Heat, the media, or the league office in a timely way."

Teams are required to report as soon as they know a player will not travel because of injury.

■ Knicks 108, Wizards 87: Carmelo Anthony and JR Smith each scored 20 points, and the New York Knicks beat the Washington Wizards for the 10th straight time, 108-87 on Friday night.

■ Celtics 96, Trail Blazers 78: Jeff Green scored 19 points, Jason Terry added 17 and the Boston Celtics cruised to a comfortable win without Rajon Rondo, topping the Portland Trail Blazers 96-78 on Friday night.

■ Nets 98, Magic 86: Joe Johnson had 22 points and the Brooklyn Nets earned their fifth straight victory, holding off the Orlando Magic 98-86 on Friday night.

■ 76ers 104, Bobcats 98: Evan Turner scored 25 points, Jason Richardson hit four 3-pointers down the stretch and the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Charlotte Bobcats 104-98 on Friday night for their third consecutive victory.

■ Raptors 101, Suns 97: DeMar DeRozan scored 23 points, Amir Johnson added 16, and the Toronto Raptors beat the Phoenix Suns 101-97 to snap a six-game losing streak on Friday night.

The Captain at NASCAR helm with first Cup title

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS – At no point in the days leading into NASCAR's season finale did Roger Penske assume his 40-year wait for a championship would finally end.

Brad Keselowski had the Sprint Cup title well within reach and a decent day would give Penske Racing its first title at NASCAR's top level. But weird things happen in racing, and the team owner wasn't taking anything for granted.

And then he slipped, just slightly, admitting two days before the Nov. 18 finale that he'd told his upper management group he was sick and tired of being just another face in the crowd at the season-ending awards ceremony.

"I kid these guys and say, 'I don't want to sit down in the front row anymore, I want to be up on the stage so I see who's at the party,'" Penske said.

Well, "The Captain" was assured of a spot on the main stage Friday night at Wynn Las Vegas Resort, where the party was very much for Penske.

Penske is the titan of motorsports, the gold standard of open-wheel racing. He's got 23 championships in various series and 15 Indianapolis 500 victories, but his NASCAR operation never could reach the pinnacle.

Now he's done it with Keselowski, and the entire industry couldn't be more pleased for Penske.

"I've known Roger Penske since I was a teenager, I have worked with Roger Penske my entire professional life, and it's really, really exciting for me to know and see Roger because in everything he's done, he's done it with high integrity, he's done it with incredible effort and he's done it with amazing class," NASCAR chairman Brian France said in an unscripted moment of a speech during one of the Champion's Week events.

"I couldn't be more thrilled that Roger, you're getting your first Sprint Cup championship ... way to go. I'm really impressed."

That's been the sentiment all week in Las Vegas, where Penske is the toast of the town.

"I think for Roger, as long as he's been in the sport and as hard as he's tried and all the championships he's won in the other series, that everybody likes seeing somebody achieve this because he's worked so hard for this," said four-time champion Jeff Gordon. "And he's such an amazing person, and such a successful person, that a lot of this banquet is around him."

McDowell leads World Challenge

Wire reports

Graeme McDowell has done a lot right this year, except for win. He now has one last chance to fix that.

McDowell, back at the course that has provided two big moments for his career, opened with three straight birdies Friday and finished strong for a 6-under 66 to take a three-shot lead in the World Challenge.

Bo Van Pelt had to save bogey on the last hole for a 68, leaving him tied for second with Keegan Bradley and Jim Furyk, who each had a 69. Tournament host and defending champion Tiger Woods was tied for the lead at one point on the back nine but had to settle for a 69. He was four shots behind.

McDowell hasn't won since this tournament in 2010.

■ Nedbank Challenge: Scotland's Paul Lawrie shot a 3-under 69 in the Nedbank Golf Challenge to take a one-stroke lead over Germany's Martin Kaymer in the 12-man event.

Lawrie had a 4-under 140 total at Gary Player Country Club. Kaymer, Lawrie's Ryder Cup teammate, shot 69.

South Africans Louis Oosthuizen (72) and Charl Schwartzel (71) were three strokes back along with Italy's Francesco Molinari (71) and American Bill Haas (73).

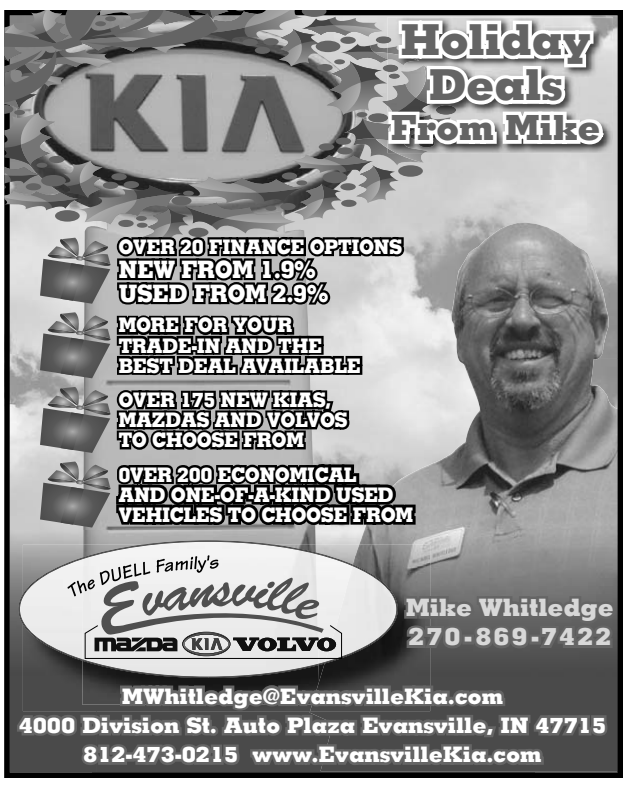

England's Lee Westwood, the two-time defending champion, was even par after a 73.

■ PGA Qualifying: South Korea's Meen Whee Kim shot a 5-under 67 on PGA West's Jack Nicklaus Tournament Course to maintain a one-stroke lead after the third round of the PGA Tour qualifying tournament.

The 20-year-old Kim had an 18-under 131 total in the six-round event.

■ LPGA Qualifying: Thailand's Moriya Jutanugarn shot a 3-under 69 to open a six-stroke lead after the third round of the LPGA Tour qualifying tournament.

The 18-year-old Jutanugarn had a 13-under total at LPGA International.

Georgia aims to topple Tide

■ Bulldogs can carve out own legacy by capturing SEC crown

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

ATLANTA – The national championship could be decided with a dream matchup between two of college football's most storied programs: Notre Dame vs. Alabama.

Of course, Georgia might have something to say about that.

The third-ranked Bulldogs are eager to wake up some echoes of their own.

Coach Mark Richt's team will take on No. 2 Alabama in a Southeastern Conference title game that essentially serves as a national semifinal. The winner of Saturday's contest at the Georgia Dome will surely land a spot against top-ranked Notre Dame in the BCS title game at Miami on Jan. 7.

While Alabama (11-1) is a seven-point favorite to remain on course for its third crown in four years, Georgia (11-1) wants to carve out its own legacy, something beyond the great teams of the early 1980s led by Herschel Walker.

"We respect and honor those guys that played ahead of us, but we really need to give the fans something else to talk about," linebacker Christian Robinson said. "If that's all we have to talk about, we must not be doing anything special."

Georgia won its only Associated Press national title in 1980, Walker's freshman year. The Bulldogs were in position to win another two years later, the running back's final season between the hedges, but Penn State knocked them off in the Sugar Bowl.

In an interesting twist, Walker announced this week that he'll soon be opening a restaurant in Athens after the first of the year.

By then, the Bulldogs hope they've cooked up another national title.

All those who've come along since Walker will be cheering on this team, including Denver Broncos cornerback Champ Bailey. He played at Georgia in the late `90s and planned to give the Bulldogs a pep talk by phone.

"We can't let this one slide," Bailey said. "This is one of those once-in-a-lifetime opportunities because I'm tired of people talking about Herschel Walker. That was 30-something years ago. There's been a lot of things happen between now and then, but no championships. That's why they still talk about him."

Indeed, even though Georgia finished No. 2 in the AP rankings in 2007, this is the best shot at finishing No. 1 since the Walker era. If the Bulldogs win the next two games, they're the champions.

"We're hungry," Robinson said. "We've got something to prove."

DAVID GOLDMAN/ASSOCIATED PRESS

So does Alabama.

A year ago, the Crimson Tide didn't even make it to Atlanta for the SEC championship game — LSU won the Western Division — but Alabama got a do-over against the Tigers for the BCS title. Even with a resounding 21-0 victory, there are still those who think the Tide didn't deserve a second chance after losing to LSU in the regular season.

If Alabama beats Georgia and Notre Dame, no one can say the Tide didn't earn it, despite an upset loss to Johnny Manziel and Texas A&M.

"There is a lot more pressure, but that is what we like," running back Eddie Lacy said. "You come to Alabama to be in situations like this and play in games like this."

The SEC finalists are remarkably similar on paper.

■ Georgia's Aaron Murray is the nation's top-rated passer, just ahead of Alabama's AJ McCarron.

■ The Crimson Tide has a dynamic running back duo with Lacy (1,001 yards, 14 touchdowns) and freshman T.J. Yeldon (847 yards, 10 TDs). So does Georgia with a pair of freshmen, Todd Gurley (1,138 yards, 14 touchdowns) and Keith Marshall (720 yards, eight TDs.)

■ Each squad has lost a couple of key receivers to injuries.

■ Alabama leads the nation in points allowed (9.2 per game) and total defense (233.7 yards). Georgia has been just as stout since senior safety Shawn Williams called out his defensive teammates before a big game against Florida, accusing them on playing "soft." Over the last five weeks, the Bulldogs have surrendered just 43 points.

"This matchup is right on," Georgia receiver Tavarres King said. "These are two great teams, two physical teams, that get after it every Saturday. It should be a fun game."

Alabama has played in plenty of epic contests over the last five years, and coach Nick Saban is one of the best at preparing his players for these sort of pressure-packed settings.

In fact, from the way the Crimson Tide was talking all week, this is no big deal.

"Just another game," McCarron said. "That's the biggest thing everyone just needs to remember. Don't make the game bigger than what it is. Just another Saturday."

Nebraska hoping for some luck vs. Badgers

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS – Nebraska's Will Compton may never forget the agonizing details of his first two conference championship game.

A third one could finally put those nightmares to rest.

On Saturday night at Lucas Oil Stadium, No. 14 Nebraska will rely on some of the lessons from losses in the 2009 and 2010 Big 12 title games as they try to claim their first Big Ten crown.

"We've been there a couple times and we've even tasted winning a championship because we ran out there the first time against Texas before we got that called back. So we've tasted the winning," Compton said. "We've got to do everything necessary to not be in those positions again and get it done this year."

Despite being one of only seven schools with 800 wins (856), appearing in 34 consecutive bowl games from 1971 to 2003 and winning 43 conference championships, the Cornhuskers (10-2, 7-1) haven't claimed a conference crown since 1999.

It's not been for lack of effort.

In 2009 against Texas, Nebraska started celebrating when Colt McCoy's errant pass sailed out of bounds as time expired. After a replay review, the officials added 1 second to the clock — enough time for Hunter Lawrence to make a 46-yard field goal as time expired again, sending the unbeaten Longhorns into the national championship game with a 13-12 victory.

A year later, Nebraska was back. This time, it jumped to a 17-0 second-quarter lead against longtime rival Oklahoma, surrendered the lead before halftime, got the lead back on a 42-yard field goal with 8 seconds left in the half, and then got shut out in the second half. Oklahoma hung on for a 23-20 victory in Nebraska's final Big 12 game, preventing the Huskers from reaching a BCS bowl.

It's been such a strange year in the Big Ten that Nebraska isn't even facing a ranked opponent in Indy.

The league's best team, No. 4 Ohio State (12-0), can't play because it is ineligible for the postseason under NCAA sanctions. Resurgent Penn State couldn't play, either, because of the same reason. The only other ranked teams in the league, No. 21 Michigan and No. 22 Northwestern, are in the same division as Nebraska, putting the stumbling Badgers (7-5, 4-4) in the title game.

Title at stake (maybe) as K-State faces Texas

By Dave Skretta
Associated Press

MANHATTAN, Kan. – There will be a time not long from now that Kansas State's players will gather to reflect on the season, one that's brought unimaginable joy along with soul-crushing heartache.

It's not that time just yet.

Despite a loss two weeks ago to Baylor that knocked the seventh-ranked Wildcats from national title consideration, they still have plenty to play for Saturday against No. 23 Texas: The third conference championship in school history and an automatic BCS bowl berth.

Not a bad consolation prize for a team expected to finish somewhere in the middle of the Big 12, but that rose to No. 1 in the BCS standings before that lousy night in Waco.

"I haven't reflected back on the season. I haven't reflected forward," Kansas State coach Bill Snyder said this week. "I have reflected on our most recent game and our preparation for the game coming up. That's where my attention has been."

It certainly hasn't been on No. 12 Oklahoma, which plays TCU earlier Saturday.

If the Sooners lose to the Horned Frogs, the Wildcats (10-1, 7-1) will already have wrapped up at least a share of the Big 12 championship and, due to tiebreakers, the BCS bid, long before Collin Klein and the rest of the senior class is introduced to a sellout crowd.

"It's going to be an emotional day for me," said Klein, who is widely expected to be invited to New York City next week for the Heisman Trophy ceremony.

The Sooners are comfortable favorites to beat TCU, which means the Wildcats are certainly preparing for the Longhorns (8-3, 5-3) as if they'll need to win themselves.

Kansas State's only Big 12 title came in 2003, when it beat then-No. 1 Oklahoma when the conference still had a championship game.

Florida State's only option is stopping Georgia Tech option

By Steve Reed
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – Florida State has no option but to stop the option — if the Seminoles want to win their 13th ACC title.

Jimbo Fisher said Friday the key to the Seminoles winning another Atlantic Coast Conference championship and clinching an automatic bid to the Orange Bowl is shutting down Georgia Tech's triple option offense.

The 13th-ranked Seminoles (10-2, 7-1 ACC) are two-touchdown favorites over unranked Georgia Tech in Saturday night's matchup. Still, Fisher knows defending the Yellow Jackets' deceiving offense can be a monumental task if you're not properly prepared.

The Yellow Jackets (6-6, 5-3) averaged 40 points per game during ACC play and their running game ranks third-best in the nation, averaging 323.3 yards per game.

Fisher said his staff has devised a good game plan to stop it.

But he's quick to point out it's difficult to simulate the speed of Georgia Tech's offense because it's so unorthodox.

"It's hard to simulate," Fisher said during a press conference Friday in Charlotte.

"It's one thing to do it in practice when you have your assignments, but we have to get used to the speed of it and how well they execute it. So it will be a huge challenge for us, no doubt."

Whatever happens, both teams could be heading for a bowl game.

The NCAA on Thursday granted Georgia Tech a waiver to ensure it would be bowl eligible even it loses and drops to 6-7 on the season.

The Yellow Jackets hope they don't need the waiver. Whether they do or not, could depend on the Seminoles' defense.

Florida State ranks fourth in the nation against the run, allowing just 85.08 yards per game and a mere 2.7 yards per carry.

But the Seminoles' task could be a little more difficult without defensive end Tank Carradine, their leading tackler, who'll miss the final two games of the season with a torn knee ligament. He led Florida State with 80 tackles and was second on the team with 11 sacks.

Even without Carradine, Yellow Jackets coach Paul Johnson said Florida State has the best defensive line his team has faced this season. They are led by Bjoern Warner, the ACC defensive player of the year.

"They're huge, and they've got a lot of them," Johnson said of Florida State's defensive line rotation. "So they roll them and they play a lot of guys. It's going to be a huge challenge. ... Georgia is awfully good at linebacker and safety, and so is Florida State, but Florida State is really good on the defensive front."

Familiar foes Tulsa and UCF to meet today for C-USA title

By Kyle Hightower
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. – It seems that Tulsa and Central Florida have reserved slots in the Conference USA championship game.

Since the inaugural contest in 2005, the Golden Hurricane and Knights have met for the league's football crown twice, splitting both matchups. Tulsa blew out UCF 44-27 and the Knights returning the favor 44-25 two years later.

Now, with UCF and others set to depart at season's end as part of massive realignment, it's fitting that C-USA's two most decorated teams will compete for the title one final time on Saturday.

"It is kind of funny if you look at it that way," Knights defensive lineman Victor Gray said. "It's like a farewell party and may the best man win in the end. So it's going to be interesting."

This will be the second meeting between the teams in three weeks, following Tulsa's 23-21 regular-season win in Oklahoma.

The Golden Hurricane's top-ranked rushing offense had their way with the Knights' defense in that Nov. 17 matchup, racking up 209 rushing yards while holding UCF to just 66.

Tulsa also sacked UCF quarterback Blake Bortles four times and were an efficient 8 for 17 on third down, helping keep the Knights off the field.

"They're talented across the board. They know we beat them the first time but it doesn't matter," Tulsa quarterback Cody Green said. "They will come out firing on all cylinders, trying to get the best of us this week."

With little time to make that many adjustments, both coaches aren't expecting completely new approaches.

Tulsa coach Bill Blankenship, who has yet to be part of a winner in the C-USA title game despite two appearances as an assistant in 2007 and 2008, said "tweaks" is about all there is time to do.

"They are a mirror to us in a lot of areas," Blankenship said. "I would like to be more like them in some areas. So the challenge of beating them twice is certainly there. But there are some positives that come out of the first win. Mainly that we get to play home."

Advice

Biracial teen should avoid contact with racist friend

COLUMNIST

Dear Amy: I am a high school junior and I have a friend, "Emory," who still acts like she is a raging hormonal and ignorant 12-year-old. She takes my things and draws inappropriate pictures on them, and all she talks about is boys, sex and boys again.

To make matters more complicated, Emory is racist. I am biracial. My skin color is quite fair compared to that of my sister.

Emory often makes fun of me because of my skin color. She says things like "You should know, you're half black," "You must like fried chicken" or "You're lucky I like you, because I hate black people," etc.

At first, her remarks were mild, but now, every day, she makes some kind of racist remark directed toward me and other races. I often tell her to stop and say how mean she sounds, but she laughs and keeps at it.

My feelings are always hurt, and I am tired of the comments. How do I back away from this relationship without bluntly telling her that I don't want to be friends anymore?

I know I should've just backed away a while ago, but it's hard.

— Flustered Friend

Dear Flustered: If you are nervous that "Emory" would retaliate or make your life unpleasant, then you could start by simply avoiding her. She will likely confront you, and you will have to tell her that you're busy with other things and that you two are moving in different directions.

I'd like to make a pitch for the truth, however. This is when you convey a very simple, easy-to-understand statement that leaves no room for interpretation. You say, "I don't like your racist statements. I've never liked these things you say and I should have told you earlier. But now I feel like you're just someone I don't want to be around."

Prepare yourself for the possibility that she will accuse you of not having a sense of humor or of taking things too personally. Your response can be, "I have a sense of humor when things are actually funny" and "I take these things personally because they are."

Dear Amy: My boyfriend and I dated for about two years, live an hour apart and have met most of each others' friends and family, including my teens. We are both in our 50s and divorced.

Quite frankly it has been a roller-coaster ride — good times and not good times. Recently he told me that he was taking a trip with a female friend (whom I had never met) to travel to an out-of-state "enlightenment seminar." I told him I could not be a girlfriend to a man who needs to have other women to hang out with and travel with. I was confused and upset, as I had been a caring, faithful and loving companion.

I am trying to move on, but my problem is that I have some expensive possessions in his home that were not gifts to him. Since his return I have had little contact with him. What is the best way to go about getting my things back in a dignified manner?

— Misled by a Miscreant

Dear Misled: You need to contact your ex and simply tell him you're sorry that things didn't work out, but that you'd like to pick up those items you left in his home. Ask him when would be a good time to do this, make an appointment and travel there to pick up your things.

There is no need to rehash what happened between you. Just face this awkwardness head on, keep your eye on the ball, determine to keep things cordial, jump in your car and get it done.

Store bagels in freezer, cut horizontally and front to back

COLUMNIST

Dear Heloise: Here are some of my favorite hints:

■ When freezing bagels, always cut them in half horizontally and place them front to back in a plastic bag. Makes it much easier to remove one piece at a time.

■ The cabinet or shelf over the refrigerator is so hard to access. Remove the doors and use it as a display space for special knick-knacks.

■ Our gift for our grandson's 16th birthday was to underwrite his driver-education course and the fee for a passport. Lasts much longer than another CD or a check.

■ Use rubber sink mats (usually under $10) under your feet in the car instead of spending $20 or $30 for the "real" thing.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: Since we are retired and on a strict budget, I felt our ideas may help some other people who are on a limited income. Each month, we give 10 percent to our church and put 10 percent in a savings account. We live on 80 percent of our income. I budget for groceries and gasoline. We watch what we buy in the grocery store, and try to do all of our errands at the same time we go to the grocery store.

I keep a record in my checkbook on a separate page for groceries and gasoline. It helps me not to overspend during the month. I have a Christmas Club account, so I know how much money I have to spend on the first of November. Thanks for the wonderful, practical advice you give each day.

— A Contented Grandmother in Louisiana

Dear Heloise: My mother is really hard to buy for. So, I came up with the following gift basket, and best of all, she loved it!

A basket filled with bath salts, scented bath oil and soap, body lotion, a favorite perfume, pretty washcloths (rolled), gel eye mask, inflatable bath pillow and a candle with a pretty holder — add to it or put in whatever things you can.

Floaters in vision are normally common unless other issues occurring

COLUMNIST

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: On four occasions, I have seen "zig zags" in one eye, and at other times the other eye. I have been to the eye doctor three times and found nothing. Looking back, I was stressed each time.

— U.W.

Dear U.W.: These sound like floaters. Floaters are bits of protein or cellular debris that seem to move around in the field of vision. They are common, and generally do not indicate that anything is wrong.

However, a sudden increase in the number of floaters, especially in the presence of visual changes such as flashing lights, can be a sign of a vitreous detachment or retinal detachment, which are eye emergencies.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: In 2005 I was treated for H. pylori infection. Will you look at a copy of the blood test I had and give me your opinion of if I still have it or not?

— P.M.

Dear P.M.: H. pylori is a bacterium that has a hand in producing ulcers, both stomach ulcers and duodenal ulcers. Modern ulcer treatment includes giving antibiotics to ulcer patients if those patients are shown to be infected with H. pylori.

Thirty percent of the U.S. population carries the bacterium in their stomach. Far from 30 percent of the population has ulcers.

Therefore, other factors are involved in ulcer genesis. One test for the presence of H. pylori is a blood test that is positive for having antibodies against that germ. That's the test you had — the antibody test. The immune system makes antibodies against any germ that invades our bodies. Your test is negative.

It does not show that you have the level of antibodies consistent with infection. A slightly more specific test is the urea breath test. A person drinks a solution of urea that has been labeled with a special kind of carbon, carbon 13. H. pylori metabolizes ingested urea to carbon dioxide. After drinking the urea, the patient is instructed to exhale deeply. If the exhaled air contains carbon 13, the test is positive. The person harbors H. pylori. I'd be satisfied with the antibody test you had. It was negative. Be glad.

Dr. Paul Donohue will be retiring at the end of 2012. Dr. Keith Roach will share the byline during the transition period and assume sole authorship of "To Your Good Health" beginning in January. Readers may write the doctors or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY: (Dec. 1). You'll often be with people you enjoy, doing what makes you happy. What could be better? In the next six weeks, family makes you proud and gives you due credit, too. Responsibilities increase in January; put health and safety first, and all goes well. Finances perk up in February. Wedding bells ring in May. Taurus and Cancer people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 14, 38, 2 and 24.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). It seems that even inanimate objects like to be appreciated. A prize goes to you, namely because you're the only one who sees it as a prize. This also proves that your imagination has magnetic properties.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). Others feel comfortable and safe around you. Maybe it's all the emotional strengthening you've done over the years. You know you can handle your feelings, so you're not afraid to be open.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). Jealousy is a normal human experience and can be healthy as long as you don't focus such feelings obsessively on one person. Let a twinge of jealousy teach you about what you want, and then focus on your own scene.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). Stay ahead of the trend. Your powers of observation are sharp, and suddenly you will see a clear way to improve upon yesterday's work, styles and habits. It's a new day, and you'll be doing things differently.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). Right now you could be feeling uncharacteristically shy. You'll probably have to force yourself to start a new conversation or post your picture to a profile, but do it! The world needs to see you.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You'll notice the person who makes an extra effort to see or talk to you. You're not imagining it. This person is smitten with you. If the feeling is mutual, this is heavenly news. But more likely, you're not sure how you feel just yet.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Share your story even if you don't think it's very interesting. Of course it wouldn't be to you, the originator. But others will find your journey fascinating.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). No good can come of comparing yourself to your idol. So why bust the good momentum you're building? Instead, enjoy looking up to another person as you work toward becoming a better version of you.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Stay at it. You will fail many times before you succeed, and it should be that way. Otherwise, you won't be ready for the big leagues. So commit and work in a way you can be proud of, win or lose.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). There's a lot of competition in your world. Instead of wasting time trying to show that you're better, you really become better by hunkering down and doing the work that needs to be done.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You'll take action and put yourself out there in a big way, mostly because the "out there" in question is a place you really want to be. You get the sense that it's where you belong.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). Just because someone else shows up with the goods people like doesn't mean it's a reason for you to pack up and go. Stay and contribute. There's always room for more excellent talent at the top.

The one-hour program will feature Alfred and Kitty Savia, members of the Evansville Philharmonic Chorus, and the St. John's East choirs. A carol sing will also take place in which audience members can request their favorite Christmas carol to sing.

The Ursuline Sisters of Mount Saint Joseph in Maple Mount are asking the public to join them for Eucharistic Adoration on the second Sunday of every month to pray for vocations. Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament will occur from 1 to 5 p.m., beginning Dec. 9 at the Motherhouse Chapel in Maple Mount, 8001 Cummings Road (located 12 miles west of Owensboro on Kentucky 56). The adoration will conclude with evening prayer with the Ursuline Sisters.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The church notes column publishes brief information about special services, revivals, gospel singings, new pastors and special church events. Events to raise funds from the community at large will not be included. Information should be sent to features@thegleaner.com or to Church Notes, The Gleaner, P.O. We've survived superstition but evil still lurking around

By David Yount
Scripps Howard News Service

In this season of hope, Christians count on the providence of a benevolent God. But just five centuries ago, many believers thought God to be ineffective against, or inattentive to, a bewildering array of sinister spirits that contributed anxiety to daily living.

Not only did angels and devils lurk in the air, but malevolent spirits were thought to reside in every object in nature. Physicians consulted astrologers before surgery or bloodletting, and people traced plagues to unfortunate configurations in the heavens.

In his book, "A World Lit Only by Fire," William Manchester painted a depressing picture of religious life in the past.

Medieval Europeans, unlike ancient pagans, persuaded themselves that they were at the mercy of forces beyond their control. They credited sorcery, witchcraft, hobgoblins, werewolves, amulets and spells for life's setbacks.

In those times, fear often trumped faith. When a wealthy woman died, for example, her servants emptied every water container in the house to protect her soul from drowning. Before burial, her body was protected from any cat or dog that might run across her coffin and transform her remains into a vampire.

Although monastic manuscripts in the age of superstition repeatedly heralded the imminent arrival of the Day of Judgment, many peasants ignored the alarms and spent the Sabbath, after church, in recreation.

Still, a permanent cloud of concern hung over daily living, which was considered to be fraught with danger. There were endless taboos: to don a clean white shirt on a Friday, to witness a shooting star in the heavens, to see a will-o'-the-wisp in the swamps or a vulture overhead were believed to invite an early death.

Superstition made Satan seem more real and his power more pervasive than that of the Redeemer.

Instead of correcting superstition, the church often overplayed its hand, exploiting fear of the devil as a more potent motive than the love of God to keep believers faithful. Faith, in short, was lopsided and hope teetered on the brink of despair.

In the modern world, we are inclined to attribute evil to the ravages of nature and the cruelty of humankind. But evil remains, as does our need for redemption.

■ Bowling Green church providing opportunities for several groups to worship in native languages

By Laurel Wilson
Daily News

BOWLING GREEN – Seth Bunn and his wife, Chhorn Bunn, were raised Buddhist in their native Cambodia, but when they came to the U.S. more than 30 years ago, "we found a true God" and are now Southern Baptist, Seth Bunn said.

The Bunns, who live in Bowling Green, are part of a group of nearly 40 Cambodian-Americans who attend worship services in their native language at First Baptist Church in Bowling Green.

The Rev. Khem Sam comes to First Baptist from his home in Nashville on the first and third Sundays of each month to lead a worship service in Cambodian.

"It's wonderful," Sam said. "They (are) grateful to be here."

On the Sundays when Sam isn't in town, Seth Bunn leads the group in Bible study.

"I'm trying to make them strong (in faith) because I don't want to get lost," he said.

The Cambodian-Americans are one of three cultural groups who meet at First Baptist to worship in another language. Groups of Vietnamese-Americans and Korean-Americans also gather at the church to worship in their native languages.

Seth Bunn of Bowling Green prays during a Christian Cambodian church service in November at First Baptist Church in Bowling Green.

In the 1980s, First Baptist began offering Bible study for the wave of Cambodian and Vietnamese immigrants who came to Bowling Green during that time, said Pat Gutierrez, international ministry coordinator for the church. By the 1990s, the groups had gotten far enough along that they wanted their own pastors, she said.

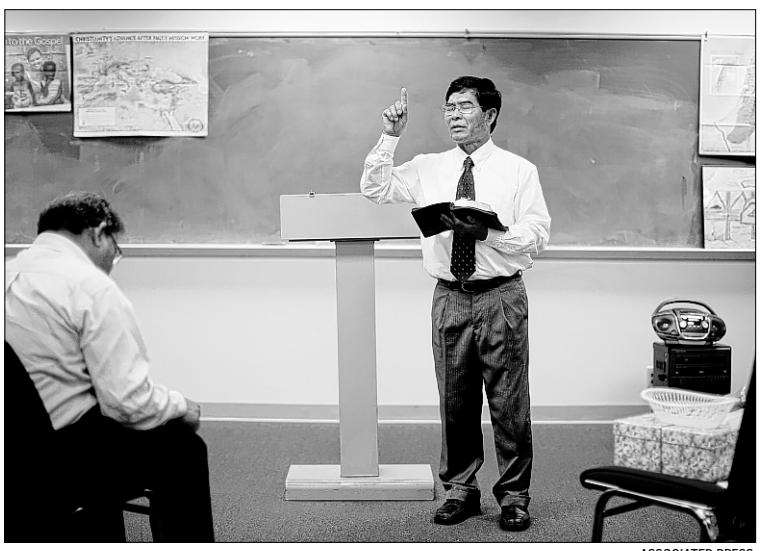

Providing worship opportunities in other languages is a way to reach out to the international community, Gutierrez said.

"It's been both a mission project and endeavor to reach out to the internationals in a little bit different way," she said.

The Rev. Luc Hoang drives from his home in Louisville on the first and third Sundays of each month to lead a small group of Vietnamese-Americans in worship at First Baptist.

Hoang said he was fortunate to be introduced to Christ by missionaries before leaving Vietnam when communists took over the country. In the U.S., he was called to become a pastor and now teaches Christianity to Vietnamese-Americans.

"Everybody know(s) Buddha, not Christ," Hoang said. "So my job is to spread out and tell them about salvation."

The Rev. Khem Sam leads a Christian Cambodian church service at First Baptist Church on Nov. 18 in Bowling Green. Sam comes to First Baptist from his home in Nashville on the first and third Sundays of each month to lead a worship service in Cambodian.

He doesn't mind driving from Louisville to Bowling Green twice a month to lead the service, he said.

"When you serve God, you forget yourself," Hoang said.

In 2007, a group of Korean-Americans started a worship service in their native language at First Baptist and were constituted as their own church a year ago. The Rev. Gyeonghwan Kim leads the Bowling Green Korean Baptist Church, which has about 65 members and offers a service and Bible study each Sunday using space at First Baptist.

Language is a barrier for many Korean-Americans, who don't understand enough English to attend an American worship service, so the Korean Baptist Church offers them a place to worship, said Grace Suh of Bowling Green, who teaches Sunday school at the Korean Baptist Church.

"There's some kind of emotional connection to your own language," she said.

Sunday worship services also offer Korean-Americans in Bowling Green a chance to come together, Kim said.

"The Korean church is the core of the communication," he said.

Christmas gift giving shouldn't be burden

BILLY GRAHAM
COLUMNIST

Dear Dr. Graham: Every Christmas, my brother and his wife always give expensive gifts to our family, and it's always made us feel like we have to do the same for them. But this year we don't have the money to spend that we once did.

How can we tactfully suggest to them that we cut down on our gift giving this year?

– J.F.

Dear J.F.: The best way is to be open and honest with them about this — and even if they don't take the hint, let your own gift giving this year be in line with what you can afford.

After all, gift giving at Christmas shouldn't be a burden (although I'm afraid it often is). Instead, it should be a joy, because it gives us an opportunity to let others know how much they mean to us, and how much we value their friendship.

But when we only give out of obligation, or to impress others — then it gets out of line. We can even give out of guilt, hoping somehow that our gift will make up for the way we've ignored them the rest of the year. Don't let these "reasons" be true of you.

Have you ever asked yourself why we give gifts at Christmas?

One reason is because after Jesus' birth wise men came from far away to find Him, and they presented Him with gifts. But more than that, they worshipped Him as the Savior of the world.

The Bible says, "They saw the child with his mother Mary, and they bowed down and worshipped him" (Matthew 2:11). Is this your response?

But Christmas is also a time to remember the greatest gift of all — the gift God gave us by sending His Son into the world for our salvation.

As this Christmas approaches, may you exclaim with Paul, "Thanks be to God for his indescribable gift!" (2 Corinthians 9:15).

Vatican selling stamps for colonnade restoration

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY – Not even the Vatican is immune from the economic crisis.

For the first time, the Vatican is seeking funds directly from pilgrims, collectors and tourists to pay for the ambitious restoration of the 17th-century Bernini colonnade surrounding St. Peter's Square.

The Vatican's Philatelic and Numismatic Office, which sells commemorative coins and stamps featuring popes, saints and the like, is offering a special (euro) 20 ($26) stamp and certificate package to help offset a recession-induced drop in corporate sponsors for the project.

The office's director, Mauro Olivieri, said Vatican officials were asked earlier this year to think up fundraising initiatives to help finance the restoration.

The series is composed of two (euro) 10 ($13) stamps affixed to a certificate, one featuring Pope Benedict XVI's coat of arms and the other the seal of Pope Alexander VII, who entrusted the Italian Baroque master Gian Lorenzo Bernini with the colonnade in 1657.

If the full 150,000 print run is sold, some (euro) 3 million ($3.9 million) could be funneled toward the restoration, Olivieri said.

"That's our hope. We'll see what happens."

The Vatican launched the restoration in 2009, aiming to secure and clean the colonnade's 284 columns, which embrace the square in a dual inner and outer row, and the 140 statues that surround and top them.

Also being restored are the piazza's central obelisk and two fountains.

The Vatican initially estimated it would take four years. The job is now not slated to be finished before 2015 and Olivieri said the cost is estimated at (euro) 14 million ($18 million).

The restoration work involved securing facade pieces at risk of falling and then removing algae, lichen and moss that have grown on the travertine over the years.

The work has been carried out in sections, allowing the piazza to be used continuously throughout the restoration.

The Church's Role in Politics

It has been over three weeks now since our country's election. Many Christians were once following the polls daily, checking the news with great frequency to see how their candidates were faring. With the election now over, political interest seems to have waned and fewer seem as politically engaged as they once were.

Whether this is right or wrong depends largely upon how one views the church's role in politics and what one regards as the Christian's most important responsibility.

Certainly, Christians are to be "salt and light" (Matthew 5:13-16), positively influencing their culture for good. Coupled with biblical passages such as Romans 13:1-7 and 1 Timothy 1:1-2, Christians are to be involved in politics at least to the degree of praying for their leaders and obeying civil laws. It seems reasonable, also, that Christians be political informed, vote for candidates that best represent biblical values, and use their influence to encourage others to do likewise.

But these actions are not to be carried out at the exclusion of a far greater duty. The church's chief role is to share the Gospel. Christians are to proclaim the centrality of the cross and how God has overcome humankind's brokenness so they may be reconciled to Him through glorious union with Christ Jesus. This is the Christian's primary concern and it must not be neglected.

The Bible does not call for political revolution. The Bible does not call for the church to set up a theocracy on earth. This world is not our final destination. To be sure, when Christ returns, He will set up His kingdom as He wishes and then we will have a perfect theocracy. Until then, however, we live in a fallen world with problems abounding, including the challenging and ubiquitous political problems facing all of us.

So let us continue to be involved politically by praying, influencing, and voting. But let us not forget the church's main role of "making disciples" (Matthew 28:19-20), committed Christ-followers, regardless of one's political leanings.

Furthermore, let us not look to our nation's leaders as miracle workers or superstars or even parental figures. They are merely fallen men and women who have been elected to office. Our ultimate hope does not lie with them. Our ultimate hope lies with our Lord Jesus Christ.

Sandy victims may face higher taxes

'We're pretty sure insurance is not going to cover everything'

By Wayne Parry
Associated Press

TOMS RIVER, N.J. — Superstorm Sandy may have one more nasty surprise still to come: higher taxes.

The math is simple and cruel. The storm left fewer properties standing, often wrecking waterfront communities that paid the highest taxes because of the desirability of living near the water.

Unless shore towns from Rhode Island to New Jersey get a big influx of aid from the state and federal governments, which are themselves strapped for cash, they will have no choice but to raise taxes on homes and businesses that survived to make up for the loss. Even with federal reimbursement of 75 percent, the towns — many of which were already struggling before the storm — could still be on the hook for tens of millions of dollars.

"Hopefully taxes won't go up; we all have individual bills that we're going to have to worry about," said Ralph Isaacs, a 71-year-old retired teacher whose home in Long Beach, N.Y., was flooded with 18 inches of water, knocking out the electricity and heat and forcing him and his wife into a rented recreational vehicle for 17 days. "We're pretty sure the insurance money is not going to cover everything."

Toms River, where 5,000 residents are still out of their homes, recently passed a $35 million emergency appropriation; debris removal alone is costing it $1 million a week. The township's Ortley Beach section, where property values and taxes were highest, saw 225 homes destroyed. Administrator Paul Shives asked state officials this week for three to five years of extra state aid.

Right now, he said, it is impossible for towns like his to even consider formulating a budget without knowing how much tax money will be coming in. Shore towns especially are expecting a wave of tax appeals from storm-damaged or destroyed homes that will lower the towns' tax bases, though that doesn't appear to have begun in earnest yet.

The realities have touched off an intense push to get the federal government to assume the largest share of the cost. New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo this week upped his state's reimbursement request from $30 billion to $42 billion; New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie asked Wednesday for $36.8 billion; and Connecticut Gov. Dannel P. Malloy is asking for more than $3 billion.

All three governors are working together to get aid delivered, and Cuomo said most of the recovery should be paid for by the federal government.

"To try to finance (recovery costs) through taxes would incapacitate this state," said Cuomo, who noted the cost of repairing just one subway station in lower Manhattan will be $600 million.

Christie — who this week announced his campaign for a second term amid high poll ratings for his handling of the storm and who is considered a leading potential Republican presidential candidate in 2016 — has told residents in storm-damaged areas to expect to pay higher taxes. This month, he told communities they can exempt storm recovery costs from a state-imposed 2 percent limit on property tax increases.

"You know, it's got to be paid for," said Christie, whose constituents already pay among the highest property taxes in the nation. "There's no magic money tree. But I think most people's towns will recognize that if they believe that the money is being spent reasonably and responsibly to rebuild their towns, they'll be happy to do it."

Vinny Curtain, whose Point Pleasant Beach, N.J., home was damaged by flooding, agreed — reluctantly.

"Every town up and down from Long Island, Staten Island to Long Beach Island is dealing with this," he said. "They're all going to face the same problem. If spending continues — and it has to — and the tax base goes down, you've got to make it up from somewhere. It's got to be paid for. It's definitely a concern."

With local towns reeling and state governments equally cash-strapped, many are looking to the federal government to make things right through the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the arm of government that has paid out billions in disaster recovery funds for Midwestern floods, tornadoes and Hurricane Katrina, among others.

But politically, Sandy couldn't have come at a worse time, with Republicans and Democrats locked in a bitter standoff over spending and taxes as a series of painful automatic tax increases and spending cuts known as the "fiscal cliff" looms if lawmakers can't agree on a deficit reduction plan. Lawmakers from states hit hard by Sandy are eager for the White House to make its emergency request to Congress for more Sandy money.

A new disaster aid funding plan was put in place by last year's budget agreement that permits President Barack Obama to seek another $5.4 billion in disaster aid — on top of $7.1 billion approved as part of a six-month government funding bill — without breaking budget limits. Lawmakers are eager to at least obtain the $5.4 billion during Congress' lame duck session. It's more likely any additional funds would come next year.

There's also a possibility that more Sandy funding could get wrapped into a broader budget deal as part of the fiscal cliff talks.

On Wednesday, FEMA approved $8.3 million in debris removal funding for four New Jersey municipalities, and New Jersey's state government got $31.1 million for feeding and housing rescue and utility workers after the storm.

Municipal governments are already doing the calculations — and not liking the answers. On the eastern half of Long Island, Suffolk County officials say Sandy has cost an estimated $70 million for debris removal and beach and road repairs, as well as police overtime. A county official estimated that after FEMA reimbursements, the county could be on the hook for $50 million but didn't anticipate having to raise taxes.

Westerly was the Rhode Island town hardest hit by the storm. Town Manager Steven Hartford said it has already paid $400,000 for storm-related repairs and sand removal; the total cost is likely to reach $3.5 million before FEMA reimbursements.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

This is one of scores of homes in Mantoloking, N.J., that were destroyed by Superstorm Sandy. Even with federal reimbursement for much of the cleanup and rebuilding expenses, hard-hit towns could be facing property tax hikes next year as a result of the unexpected costs, and the loss of millions of dollars of taxable property.

PRIME CROPLAND SELLING AT Absolute AUCTION

Wed. Dec. 12th, 10 AM

21482 Hwy 811, Reed, KY. From Henderson, at US 60 and US 41 take US 60 east 9.3 miles then north on HWY 811 for 3.9 miles to the auction site. Watch for signs!

The sellers have authorized Kurtz Auction & Realty Co. to sell the following at absolute auction:

758 +/- ACRES IN 4 TRACTS

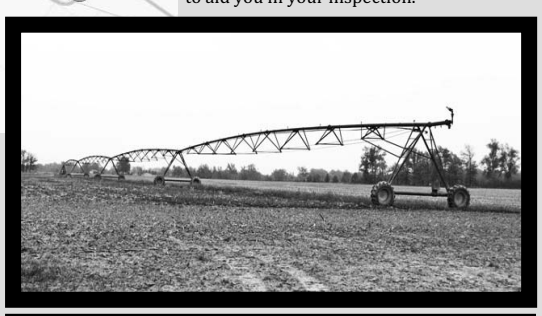

PRODUCTIVE CROPLAND

BETWEEN HENDERSON AND OWENSBORO, KENTUCKY

Terms: 10% down day of auction, balance due in 30 days. Possession: With deed, plowing rights granted day of auction. Possession of home on Tract 3 on or before June 30, 2013. Acreages: These acreages are estimated according to source deeds referenced to PVA and FSA maps. The buyer will be receiving the same deed description that the seller received. The acreage estimated on Tract 1 is less than what is described in the deed because of avulsion from the Ohio River. All tracts are in flood zone AE.

Property Inspection: View these properties anytime. Download a bidder's information packet from kurtzauction.com to aid you in your inspection.

Tract 1: 153 +/- acres of mostly tillable river-bottom land. Oil production pays about $1200 annually. Predominant soil types are Huntington and Egam. Tract 2: 294 +/- acres of mostly tillable cropland. The fields feature long rows of mostly Sciotoville, Ginat and Weinbach soils. This tract has a 50' x 100' metal shop building and blacktop frontage on both roads. Approximately 100 acres of the northwest portion of this tract are tiled. Tract 3: 250 +/- acres of mostly level cropland with a small portion of woods. There are two 35-acre center-pivot irrigation systems that share one well. The predominant soil types are Melvin, Weinbach, Ginat and Sciotoville. Tract 4: 58 +/- acres of mostly level land, 52 acres are tillable. Soil types are Melvin, Sciotoville, Ginat and Weinbach.

Sellers: The Beasley Farm Trust and Heirs of J. L. and Lucille Beasley

6 p.m. on B
Movie: A Few Good Men

A brash young Navy lawyer and a by-the-book colleague (Tom Cruise, Demi Moore) defend two closemouthed Marines accused of murdering a fellow soldier deemed to have "broken the code." Base commander Nathan R. Jessep (Jack Nicholson), who regards himself as untouchable, stonewalls the attorneys. Kevin Bacon and Kevin Pollak also star.

7 p.m. on 14
Movie: It's a Wonderful Life

You know the story: Small-town guy George Bailey defers one big dream after another to stay home, marry local girl and run family business. Facing financial ruin, he's pulled from suicidal despair by an angel who shows him what a terrible place the world would be if he'd never lived. Hey, his small life made a pretty big impact after all! James Stewart, Donna Reed and Lionel Barrymore star, with Henry Travers as the angel whose work with George earns him a promotion.

7 p.m. on 44
Made in Jersey

Donovan and Nolan (Kyle MacLachlan, Kristoffer Polaha) call on football-savvy Martina (Janet Montgomery) to woo a prospective client: a former high-school quarterback (Brando Eaton, "The Secret Life of the American Teenager") whose injuries went ignored by his coaches and cost him a shot at the pros. A glitch in the accounting department delays Martina's first paycheck in the new episode "Payday."

7 p.m. on T
Movie: Inception

One of the best-reviewed movies of 2010, and certainly one of the most challenging, writer-director Christopher Nolan's strikingly visual melodrama plays liberally with reality and illusion. Leonardo DiCaprio has one of his best roles to date as a futuristic thief able to rob others of what's in their minds. When he's recruited to reverse that process and plant a thought in someone's (Cillian Murphy) mind instead, things get very complicated.

8 p.m. on L
My Crazy Obsession

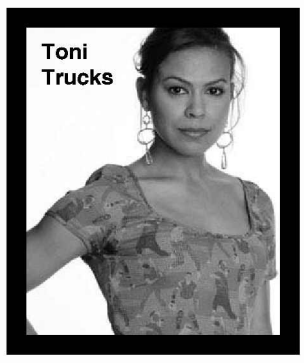

We all know someone who goes a little wild decorating for the holidays, but the folks featured in the new episode "Christmas Collection" really take it to extremes. They include a woman who has more than 120 fully decorated Christmas trees, a man whose goal is to cover his property in 1 million lights, a couple with a houseful of nutcrackers and snowmen, and another pair obsessed with holiday inflatables.

8 p.m. on SF
Movie: Dragon Wasps

As you might expect from the title, giant mutated stinging insects are the monsters du jour in this cheese-tastic new sci-fi tale. Corin Nemec, Dominika Julliet, Benjamin Easterday and Nikolete Noel are the human stars who confront the insects — created by corporate science gone horribly wrong, of course — in the rain forests of Belize. It's not Oscar-worthy, but if you like big bug flicks, you'll have fun with this.

8 p.m. on Z
Movie: Sinners and Saints

Set in New Orleans, this 2010 actioner stars Johnny Strong ("Black Hawk Down," "Get Carter") as a detective reeling from the death of his son and the failure of his marriage. He's teamed with a young homicide detective (Kevin Phillips) to investigate a series of torture killings, and they land in the middle of an all-out war between the local gangs and international mercenaries. Costas Mandylor, Tom Berenger and Kim Coates also star.

9 p.m. on 17
Wedding Band

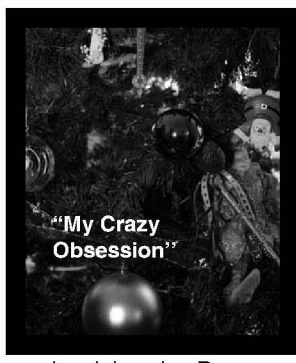

Rutherford's (Melora Hardin) high-school nemesis (Molly Sims) hires her to plan an adult prom. Tommy (Brian Austin Green) becomes the envy of every other single guy when he starts dating a woman whose job is to pick song snippets for iTunes. Stevie's (Harold Perrineau) new love interest, a florist (Fiona Gubelman), has a very special sex technique in the new episode "Time of My Life."

9:30 p.m. on N
The Nanny

Fran must intervene when an exasperated Maxwell (Charles Shaughnessy) threatens to send Brighton (Benjamin Salisbury) to military school after he receives a failing science grade in "The Bird's Nest." Lauren Lane, Daniel Davis, Nicholle Tom and Madeline Zima also star.

9:30 p.m. on TL
Everybody Loves Raymond

Ray and Debra (Ray Romano, Patricia Heaton) take a romantic trip to Vermont, where their efforts to make everything perfect for each other make for a very weird weekend. Imagine Ray suggesting the couple visit an antique show. Debra, just as eager to please, agrees to tour the Ben & Jerry's ice-cream operation. Brad Garrett also stars in the encore of "The Getaway."

10 p.m. on 44
Two and a Half Men

She's baaack! Melanie Lynskey returned to the role of Rose, Charlie's (Charlie Sheen) stalker, for this episode. Charlie and his new girlfriend, Linda (guest star Ming Wen), are growing closer, and consummation isn't far off. But for some reason Charlie keeps seeing Rose's face everywhere. Jon Cryer and Angus T. Jones also star in "City of Great Racks."

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Saturday, Dec. 1, the 336th day of 2012. There are 30 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 1, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln sent his Second Annual Message to Congress, which was read aloud by the Secretary of the Senate. In it, Lincoln called for the abolition of slavery, saying that "in giving freedom to the slave, we assure freedom to the free," and toward the end of his message, wrote: "Fellow-citizens, we can not escape history. We of this Congress and this Administration will be remembered in spite of ourselves."

On this date:

In 1860, the Charles Dickens novel "Great Expectations" was first published in weekly serial form.

In 1942, nationwide gasoline rationing went into effect in the United States.

In 1955, Rosa Parks, a black seamstress, was arrested after refusing to give up her seat to a white man on a Montgomery, Ala., city bus; the incident sparked a year-long boycott of the buses by blacks.

In 1969, the U.S. government held its first draft lottery since World War II.

Five years ago: Police in Wichita, Kan., identified a body found days earlier as that of Emily Sander, a missing college student whose disappearance drew added attention after the discovery she was also an Internet porn model named "Zoey Zane." (A suspect, Israel Mireles, was convicted of rape and murder and sentenced to life in prison with no chance of parole.) Four suspects were charged in Miami in the shooting death of Washington Redskins star Sean Taylor. (One ended up pleading guilty to second-degree murder.)

Think about it

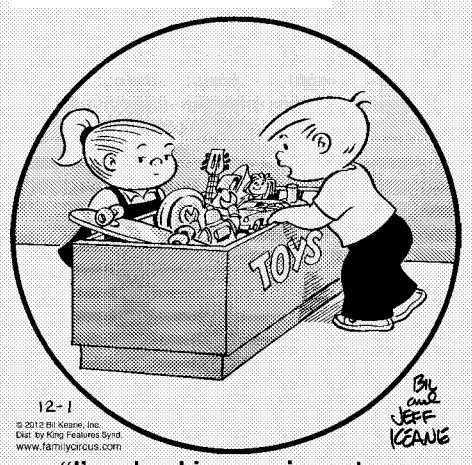

"Life begins when a person first realizes how soon it will end." — Marcelene Cox, American writer.
